The Last ToyFare

Editor-in-Chief Pat McCallum gets some tough monkey love from Mattel's Space Monkeys

This is the last ToyFare Special.

It was early January when Gareb Shamus, Wizard Press publisher, came down to my office and gave me the news. Needless to say, I was pretty shocked. We talked, going over how the reaction to ToyFare: The Guide to Collectible Toys wasn't what we expected and how we were off on the projected sales. We went over how we misjudged public demand for an entire magazine based solely on toys and, even after he left my office, I still couldn't believe what I heard.

Now I gotta get ToyFare out every month.

Yep, you heard what I did: ToyFare is set to join Wizard: The Guide to Comics and InQuest: The Guide to Collectible Card Games as a monthly Wizard Press publication. All that talk of misjudging public demand? See, we messed up in a good way. The first ToyFare Special Edition released last November sold out nationwide in a matter of days, followed by thousands of fan letters clamoring for more ToyFare.

So, okay—more ToyFare it is.

As soon as we wrap up the special you hold in your hands, we'll be shifting into a monthly schedule with an all-new ToyFare #1, due in July. Which is both good and bad. The good part is I've wanted to do a monthly toy-based magazine for years, and now, thanks to the fans who supported the first TF special and took the time to write in, we have one. On the flip side, I had to find the right people to pull this book off on a regular basis every month. Up until now, it's been handled under the umbrella of the Wizard Special Editions staff, but we're gonna be flyin' solo now. We needed our own dedicated team in place. Sooo...I began with a little staff reshuffling.

ToyFare's editor will be Scott Beatty, regular copy editor on Wizard and editor of the ToyFare specials. Aside from his encyclopedia-like knowledge of toys, Scott's responsible for some of the action figure scenes that fill our price guide. Just the right mix of brains, toy savvy and love of skin flicks that ToyFare needs.

Scott's right-hand man will be Assistant Editor Tom Palmer Jr., a five-year Wizard contributor who, beneath a quiet, well-mannered exterior, is responsible for 14 brutal murders in the Florida Keys. He'll come in handy posing figures too.

And as we fill the remaining editorial and design slots for ToyFare, we've already begun hammering out what we're stuffin' in our first few monthly issues. We're dropping some sections of the book, tweaking others and returning old favorites like "Twisted Mego Theater" (if you thought the "Spider-Macerena" was...special, then "Supervillain Jeopardy" is off the stupid-scale). For the most part, it'll be the same ToyFare you've come to expect, only with a little more spit and polish. And we get to number 'em now.

So hey, go lose yourself in these pages for a while, drop us a note about how we're doin' and we'll see you again in July. (Assuming we don't offend you too much with the "Big Shot" photos in this issue's price guide.)

In the meantime, I've got me a new magazine to put together, so I'd better quit yakkin' and start workin'.

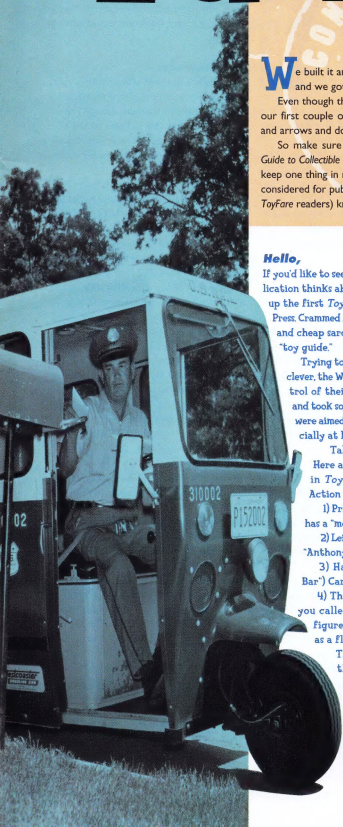
¡HOLY FRIJOLES!

We built it and they came. We published the ToyFare Special Edition in November '96 and we got us a big, heapin' helpin' of letters in return.

Even though the mag was pretty durned popular overall, it still wasn't for everyone, as our first couple o' letters show. But that's all right. We stand ready to take your slings and arrows and dodge none of 'em. We'll face 'em head-on.

So make sure to keep writing, and we'll make sure to keep answering. ToyFare: The Guide to Collectible Toys becomes a monthly in July, so we'll have letter columns a-plenty. But keep one thing in mind: For the future, only letters that contain a name and address will be considered for publication. You know who we are. It's only appropriate that we (and all the ToyFare readers) know who you are when you sound off. Fair enough? Let's roll…



Hello,

If you'd like to see what a comic book publication thinks about action figures, pick up the first ToyFare farce from Wizard Press. Crammed full of nasty toilet humor and cheap sarcasm, it pretends to be a "toy guide."

Trying to appear witty, funny and clever, the Wizard simpletons lost control of their comic book mentality and took some real cheap shots. They were aimed at almost everyone, especially at Kenner's Star Wars line.

Talk about contradictions! Here are the first four figures in ToyFare's "Top 10 Hottest Action Figures" column:

1) Princess Leia (who you said has a "monkey face")

2) Leia in Boushh Disguise (with "Anthony Kiedis' face")

3) Han Solo in ("Chocolate Bar") Carbonite

4) The 12" Ben Kenobi (which you called a "worthless old man figure," and shamefully posed as a flasher)

These are supposed to be the "hottest action figures." Why rip them apart so?

There are a couple of interesting and informative articles, but this piece of trash is hardly worth $3.99, in any currency.

Insulted Action Figure Collector
Seattle, WA

Hello, Insulted AFC,

The whole premise behind ToyFare is to have a bit of fun with collectible toys. There's a lot of humor in the book, and there will continue to be a bit of humor in future issues. If your particular bent of humor doesn't quite match up with ours, we're sorry. Many people do seem to like it. Kenner, in fact, rather likes it. They had a hoot and a holler over the inaugural ToyFare and had nothing but good things to say about it.

To speak specifically to your "Top 10" concern, those are the hottest action figures around. It just so happens that Princess Leia can be an after-market success and have a face like a monkey at the same time. We think the comparison photos we printed in that issue point this up.

And our sarcasm is never "cheap." After all, we're worth $5.49 in Canadian currency.

Dear ToyFare,

Today I got my Molten Man order form from ToyFare back in the mail with "Return to Sender" stamped on it. The envelope was unopened. I guess it's obvious that your 7,500-limited production run of these figures ran out and you decided to force American taxpayers to fund the returning of all subsequent order forms.

This is unbelievable. I tried to give you

money to make me a figure, and it's literally refused. The screwing over of collectors by limited editions has never been more blatant than this. But I'm sure a bunch of speculator bastards who don't even know who Molten Man is ordered this.

I'm out the price of the magazine—which I wouldn't have bought if not for the offer—the cost of a check and a stamp, and I've got nothing to show for it except an incomplete Toy Biz Spider-Man collection. Until now, I've never felt like just giving up this whole collecting business for a while and having someone call me when the speculators go home and/or die.

Eric Sansoni
eas179@psu.edu

Yes, 7,500 Molten Man action figures sold out. No, American taxpayers did not foot the bill. We paid a boatload of return postage on these suckers. The manufacture of action figures, a bit unfortunately, goes like this:

You have to broadcast a number to a plant before they can even start to crank out action figures. They need to know how much material they'll need, how much the cost will be based on those materials, and most importantly, they need a quantity to put the job on their schedule. The manufacturing and shipping process then takes six months. We had to place the order for Molten Man in August '96. ToyFare came out in November '96. We had no track record, having never published ToyFare, and having never done a toy offer before. So we took our best guess and decided 7,500 would be a safe number in case it bombed, and would probably be enough to satisfy demand if it was a hit.

We guessed wrong. And we've learned from that. There will be more Kitty Pryde figures available than Molten Man. And, although it's impossible to tell from the outside of an envelope who's a speculator bastard and who isn't, we hope all of these figures wind up in the hands of fans.

By the way, Eric, we're very confident that there's at least $3.99 worth of joy (or $5.49 Canadian) in every issue of ToyFare, figure offer or no. So if the offer is the only reason you bought the mag, send us your address. We'll send you a refund.

Photos: Paul Salvadi

ToyFare people,

I loved the offer for the Molten Man figure. I also have a few thoughts about it.

1) Why did you choose Molten Man, instead of a character more deserving to be made into a figure, like Daredevil or Captain America?

2) I think you guys should continue to have offers like this each month.

3) Make the price for each offer five bucks.

BigMac

We love li'l Moltey ourselves and we have a few replies to your thoughts.

1) Toy Biz already had DD and Cap figures in the works, and therefore would not allow us to do them on an exclusive basis.

2) We're thinkin' about it. Let us know what you think.

3) Fulfilling through the mail one piece at a time gets pretty darned expensive. Unfortunately, eight bucks is as fine as we can cut things.

Dear ToyFare,

Danny Kim wrote you in your first special complaining about the practice of quantity limits on action figures at retail stores, and you agreed with him. You said that "limiting is a pretty scummy practice." I disagree.

I don't know how many times I've rushed to a store to buy a certain figure, only to find that the local comic store owner has snapped them all up because they're "rare." Then he sells them in his store for five or six times the price paid. So now, the comic store is my only option, and I have to pay 20 bucks! If that store owner was limited on how many he could buy, this wouldn't be a problem.

Thanks for letting me get that rant off my chest. If these guys want to "invest," they should buy stocks, and leave the toys to those that play with them.

Laura L. Holt
Florence, AL

Goes ta show ya, there's two sides to every story. Any other opinions out there? Maybe this next guy's got a different way of looking at things…

Dear ToyFare,

I'm a little ticked off after reading your special's letters column. Everyone seems to be whining about the same thing: "I can't find this/afford this because of the toy collectors! I can't get a Picard Tapestry all because of the 'Greedy Toy-Mongers!' " Well, get off it!

I'm tired of being called a "Greedy Toy-Monger." I'm not out stealing toys from kids or intimidating children. What I am doing is getting out of bed at 8:00 a.m. on Saturday morning and trudging out in a foot of snow and sub-zero temperatures and finding what I want! I love toys and my favorite part of toy collecting is the thrill of the hunt! Now if I go through all of that and I hunt down some rare figures, you'd better believe I'm going to buy as many of them as I can, and I'm going to take those extra figures to a toy show somewhere, and I'm going to earn my money back and try to support my hobby. So if you want those toys, you're gonna have to get off your ass and just try to beat me to 'em!

Nick Williams
Alton, IL

Hmmm. The other side of the story, rather clearly stated. I think the battle has begun.

To Toy Lovers Everywhere:

If you're like me, you buy toys to have fun with, not to leave in the package. Like me, you probably hate it when a figure that you would really like to play with becomes the "limited-edition, hard-to-get" figure in a set. Thankfully, I have come up with a solution to this problem. The following is a step-by-step process on how to have your cake and eat it too. (Note: This process works best with action figure companies that use the same molds over again.)

Step 1: Decide which "limited-edition, hard-to-get" figure you want to make. I have chosen to make the Picard from "Tapestry," the most valuable Playmates Star Trek figure.

Step 2: Find crappy figures to make your "limited-edition, hard-to-get" figure with. I decided to use some Captain Picard figure with a dopey body and the Admiral Kirk figure from the "Generations" line.

Step 3: Detach the heads from the bodies. From the toys, that is...don't try this with people.

Step 4: Attach Picard's head to Kirk's body. To do so, I would advise putting a little bit of Vaseline on the bottom of the headpiece so it can slip onto the body with ease.

Of course, not all brands of figures require all these steps. Some need more work, some less. Some may also need repainting, which is not everybody's specialty. I should know—I've tried.

The point of all this is that if a lot of people made their own figures, people wouldn't have to spend lots of money on the real thing.

Mike Ferrarella
Maspeth, NY

This guy advises putting Vaseline on Captain Kirk??? That's gotten about 53 kajillion assorted intergalactic babes in all sorts of trouble.

But aside from that, it sounds pretty sound. If you happen to have a Picard Tapestry, great. Keep it packaged if you want. Play with your homemade one.

Hey, ToyFare,
I was disappointed with your ToyFare special, because you left some action figures out of your price guide that should have been in it, like Silverhawks, Gobots and He-Man. I don't know what you were thinking.

Michael Bermudez
TIKIGOD20
@aol.com

We don't even know what we're thinking half the time. But it usually has something to do with cheese.

The old saying goes that there's only so much room, so we can only have so many listings in the guide. The lines you mentioned have very scant secondary market activity these days, so we decided not to list them in favor of newer lines that are being actively traded. Which is not to say they'll never appear. We may add certain lines, or we may feature some on a rotating basis. Let us know what you'd like to see (and what you'd like us to tank) and we'll make changes based on readers' response as appropriate.

Hi,
Perhaps the next ToyFare should come polybagged with a Depends undergarment, because I laughed so hard that I wet myself!

Hey, at least that would be something useful. If I get one more mag polybagged with an AOL disk, I'm gonna spit! My collection of useless AOL disks far exceeds the limits of good taste, and they are being put to use as drink coasters. They can also be used as personal assault weapons when thrown like ninja stars.

Toy Lingo

The toy specialty dictionary

AFTER-MARKET (ahf-ter-mahr-kit) — Any toy seller, other than standard retailers such as Toys R Us, Wal-Mart or FAO Schwarz, that sells action figures for prices typically higher than the suggested retail price. "After-market" sellers might include comic book specialty stores, flea market vendors and private collectors.

ARTICULATION (ahr-tik-u-lay-shun) — The amount and quality of moveable joints and parts of an action figure. Most often, action figures are "articulated" at the arms and legs. Newer figures sometimes sport waist, knee, elbow or even ankle and wrist articulation to make figures more poseable.

CARDED (kahr-did) — Refers to an action figure that is distributed inside a plastic blister on a cardboard "card." Additionally, "carded" is used to denote an unopened figure, usually understood to be in mint condition.

LOOSE (loos) — Refers to an action figure that has been opened from its original blister card. "Loose mint" usually denotes a figure that has been opened, but has all its accessories intact and undamaged.

MINT IN MINT BOX (MIMB) (mihnt-in-mihnt-bocks) — An action figure that is unopened from its original box, or one that has been opened, but was kept in "mint" condition inside its intact original box. The quality of the box is then denoted by a scale of C1 (very poor) to C10 (pristine mint). "MIMB" ratings most often are applied to original series Mego action figures, which first shipped in closed cardboard boxes. Later releases sported a clear cellophane "window."

MINT ON CARD (MOC) (mihnt-on-cahrd) — An action figure that is unopened (and therefore, in "mint" condition) from its original blister card. The quality of the card is then denoted by a scale of C1 (very poor) to C10 (pristine mint). This rating is applied to most contemporary action figures, as well as later Mego toy releases.

RE-DECO (ree-deh-koh) — Also known as "repaint." The process of repainting or casting an existing figure in a different color plastic in order to create a new character figure.

RE-ISSUE (ree-ish-oo) — The process of re-making an action figure from an existing mold and re-distributing it to toy sellers following a sell-out of the original run.

SHORT-PACKED (shawrt-pahked) — Refers to the toy company custom of choosing to distribute particular figures in a lesser quantity per shipping case. For example, in a case of 24 figures, a "short-packed" figure might only come two per case, while other figures arrive in quantities of four or six. Typically, short-packed figures are considered "rare" and are more expensive to purchase in the after-market.

VARIANT (vair-e-ant) — A version of an action figure that is slightly altered from the same character's regular figure. Variants usually exist in lesser quantities than the standard figure and are more valuable. During the production runs of action figures, sometimes figures are altered slightly in order to adhere to quality control standards. For instance, in the recent Star Wars: Power of the Force action figures, a "tan vest" variant of Luke Skywalker Jedi Knight exists, produced in the line's initial run. The newer "black vest" figure is more readily available, and therefore, less valuable.

Survey Says...

TOYFARE'S AOL POLL

Hey, size really does matter! When us Wizard Press folk began work on this second Toyfare special, we jumped to our online forum and tossed out a couple of action figure-related questions we've been bandying around the office. One of the biggest debates among toy buyers is whether or not there should there be a universal toy industry standard for action figure size. Thus, we asked our online muchachos...

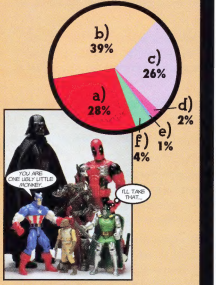
Which action figure size do you prefer?

a) 3 3/4 inches (Star Wars)
b) 5 inches and up (Toy Biz)
c) 6 inches and up (McFarlane Toys)
d) 8 inches (Megos)
e) 10 inches (Marvel Universe/Toy Biz)
f) 12 inches (G.I. Joe, Toy Biz Marvel dolls, Star Wars Collector's Series, etc.)



Does size matter? According to the online responses, personal preference really decided this question. Many fans seemed to pick their favorite size based on which action figures were their favorites. However, a passel of fans recognized the 5-inch figures as the perfect balance between perfect sculpting and poseability. "Star Wars [figures] are too small to move all their joints, and McFarlane's are too large and model-like," said one online responder. "Toy Biz got it right. They're middle-of-the-road, catering to collectors and kids."

We also asked:

Should the toy industry adopt a universal standard for action figure size?

Yes (43%) or no (57%).

It was close. Though it would be wild to see Luke Skywalker in scale to Spider-Man or Spawn, the majority of fans like to have their lines separate and distinct. The rationale against having a universal size standard among the different action figure lines was summed up best by one fan who stated, "Star Wars toys, at 3 3/4 inches, need to be that small to accommodate the large line of ships Star Wars incorporates. However, Spawn, at 6 inches, doesn't need to worry so much about vehicles, so [McFarlane Toys] can sculpt its toys bigger."

more reader mail...

Ah, now there's a person of taste and distinction. Someone who obviously appreciates the Wizard Press pyramid of comedy that goes—in ascending order—cheese, pants, monkeys, midgets and flatulence.

By the way, excess AOL disks also make great low-cost Frisbees or cheese slicers.

Dear ToyFare,

I know you guys talk to Toy Biz. Could you please tell them to stop making pre-posed figures? The latest X-Men lines (Robot Fighters and Mutant Monsters) feature figures in horrible poses, like Kenner's Total Justice toys. Please keep 'em articulated. They are, after all, "action" figures.

Mike Bowsher Jr.
Jackson, MI

Yeah, we're down with Toy Biz. So we called Toy Biz Junior Product Manager Carlos Lopez, who said, "Robot Fighters and Mutant Monsters come loaded with intricate accessories, so we couldn't afford full articulation. We put them in funky poses rather than just having them stand there looking static."

Dear ToyFare,

All right, got a question: I have two '96 Power of the Force Han Solo in Carbonite toys. The packaging on one says "in carbonite freezing chamber," and the other says "in carbonite block." But the toy inside each of the packages is exactly the same as the other. Why are the descriptions different? Is one worth more that the other? I just gots to know!

Falcon9235
@aol.com

The descriptions are different because Kenner makes running changes in production for quality control purposes. The "in carbonite block" is a more recent and more "correct" version. Neither is worth more than the other, and we would not anticipate either becoming worth more than the other unless one of these two events comes to pass:

1) One is found to have been produced in much lesser quantity than the other, or

2) Ewoks are discovered to be just junior Wookiees who smoked a lot when they were young and thus had their growth stunted.

We're not holding our breath for either.

Dear ToyFare,

I know how to take price tags off a plastic cover over a figure, but what about when the tag is on the actual board? I was also wondering if price tags that remain on figures lower the value of the figure.

Graham Hughes
Carnation, WA

We recommend trying to very gently scrape tags off the card with a fingernail as a first resort. If that fails, try Goo Gone, an adhesive remover available at most hardware stores. But be careful: Even though tags on boards do lower values ever so slightly, you'll lower your figure's value even more if you damage the card. Try removing stickers from your little brother with it first.

And fer Pete's sake, don't go sniffin' Goo Gone. Doing that can stunt your growth.

Toy Guide,

In the Generation X toy line, how come Orphan Maker is called "The Protector"?

Gary Bundy, Jr.
New Castle, DE

'Cause, according to Toy Biz Senior Product Manager Jesse Falcon, "We've got to scale back some of the names a little for a younger audience." The bottom line is that Toy Biz doesn't want to scare away a younger audience (or their parents) by calling a toy an "Orphan Maker." Similarly, the X-Men's "Holocaust" was renamed "Dark Nemesis" for toys.

Dear ToyFare,

Hey!

Every time I dial the Toy Biz customer service number as seen on the back of my Adam Warlock Figure package, an operator cheerfully says that "the number you have dialed is not in service." What gives?

Dave Gallaher
DGALLAHER
@ATHENA.HOOD.

What gives is that Toy Biz has changed its customer service number. You can now reach them at 1-800-634-7539. No fair calling them and asking if they've got Prince Albert in a can.

Dear ToyFare,

Why don't toy companies make regular, plain old like-you-see-'em-in-comics-and-on-TV action figures? I would love to go to the store and buy a regular Batman or Wolverine. Instead I have to buy Solar Shield Batman and Ninja Wolverine.

Brad Hemsley
Jasper, IN

They did, once upon a time. Usually the first version of a given character is a "regular" version. After that come the variations on the theme.

It's like this: Toys come in assortments. Although we, the unionized, federated, amalgamated geeks of America are very familiar with second-tier comic characters (Zsasz of the Batman neighborhood, Nightcrawler of the X-Men), most moms 'n' dads aren't. The toy companies want to make sure there's always a Batman or a Wolverine on the shelves. Therefore, they load the assortments with multiple variations of the first-tier guys.

Dear ToyFare,

I have noticed that in the Star Wars: Power of the Force action figure series, the earlier versions of Luke Skywalker, Ben (Obi-Wan) Kenobi and Darth Vader have lightsabers that are 94 cm in length, and later editions have lightsabers 7.1 cm in length. Could you please tell me why they changed the length in the lightsaber and if there is any price difference between the earlier and later editions of these figures?

Steven Zimmerman
Elk Grove, CA

As mentioned above, it's that ever-wacky Kenner commitment to quality. The company changed the size of the sabers (not that size really matters) just because it looks better. As to what they're worth, look it up in the price guide. We're tired of price guide questions for today.

And that ain't all we're tired of. It's been fun, but we're gonna go sleepies now. Gotta get up at 8:00 a.m. tomorrow and trudge through a foot of snow to the toy store.

But we'll meet ya right back here in July for the monthly ToyFare.

Contrary to popular rumor, the editors of ToyFare are not mean and abusive to toys. We likes our toys just fine…medium rare, mostly.

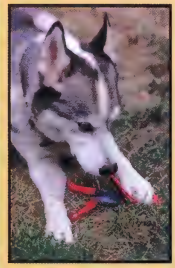
Zach's Backyard



Every month, one letter will be answered by Zach Malamute, Official ToyFare spokesdog and America's Favorite Malamute for four years running!

Dear ToyFare,

I am writing in response to your ToyFare Special. After purchasing the issue with much anticipation, I was insulted by the "Stress Test" article by John Seals. Not only did you destroy numerous hard-to-find Mego Spider-Man figures, but you possibly endangered the life of Zach the dog, who ate some of the figures. Don't get me wrong—I'm not an animal rights activist, but rather a serious action figure collector. With such a fantastic toy special as it was, I am disappointed that you could not have found a more beneficial use of six color pages.

Steven Ryker
Bristol, IN

Thanks for letter, Steven. Was tasty. Me feel all warm and happy because you care about Zach. You don't want Zach to be hurt by toys. You good. But toys were tasty. Tasty tasty yummy yummy yummy yummy. Not like Lubriderm hand lotions. Lubriderm bad. Made Zach poop like goose for week. Zach made stain like you no believe in John's living room. John not happy with Zach. John chase Zach around house but John too fat. John not catch Zach. Whoop, Zach feel pressure in bladder. Zach go now.

Winners!

Announcing who won what from the ToyFare Winter Special. Congrats to all!

Thanks to all who entered the Dark Aegis Contest and the ToyFare Scavenger Hunt in the first ToyFare. And a big congrats to Jose C. Diaz of Morganville, N.J. who won the nifty-sweet Dark Aegis prototype from Toy Biz—one of only SO ever made!

Meanwhile, Leon Norris of Aberdeen, Wash., identified all the hidden toys in the ToyFare Scavenger Hunt and gets a spiffy homemade Bullseye Mego figure created by custom modeler Charlee Flatt (who did the cover for this here ToyFare).

AVENGERS REBORN!

From l. to r.: Scarlet Witch, Loki, Thor and "Heroes Reborn" Iron Man. Below: Captain America...the fifth Avenger?

The Avengers, Marvel's classic superteam, will finally get its own action figure line this October.

At February's International Toy Fair, Toy Biz announced that its new Avengers: Legends of Power line will include Thor, Scarlet Witch, Loki and "Heroes Reborn" Iron Man, based on Jim Lee's current comic book revamp of the character. Each figure stands at a large six-inch size, with intricate sculpting and action poses. "They're highly detailed," said Toy Biz Junior Product Manager Carlos Lopez. "There are no crazy mechanisms or light shows on them. The figures just look fantastic." In addition, each figure will come with accessories based on the characters' superpowers and weapons. Thor is equipped with his hammer, Mjolnir, and a "thunder cloud" base. Iron Man has a power converter base. The Scarlet Witch comes with a gravity-defying hex power. And Loki carries a "Sphere of Mischief."

With the exception of Iron Man, all of the characters appear with their classic looks, and not their recent "Heroes Reborn" revisions in Marvel's comics. As Toy Biz, a division of Marvel Comics, explains, the choice was to reflect the superteam as fans know and love them. "It's basically the Avengers spanning through the ages," Lopez said. "They are made to look very classic. Why would we do a line of figures that has been highly requested for years in the way they appear in three issues, as opposed to the way people have come to know them for the last 20 years?"

Of all the heroes, Iron Man was singled out to have his costume updated to his current "Heroes Reborn" look. Lopez claims that the decision was made because the character has already appeared in several Toy Biz lines in various forms. "We have done Iron Man before, but there's been nothing like this," Lopez said. "The [reason] why we did [the 'Heroes Reborn' armor] is that it just looked very cool."

Another question that begs to be answered is how Toy Biz decided which figures would be included in the assortment. "We figured we could use four characters who are either highly requested by fans or we hadn't done justice to the first time around," said Lopez. He also hinted that a fifth character might be included in the line as a chase figure. According to Lopez, it's no coincidence that a certain shield-slingin' Avenger included in the recent Spider-Man: Electro-Spark assortment was made just a bit larger than other Toy Biz figures. ■Tom Palmer Jr.

KISS TRADES VINYL FOR PLASTIC

McFarlane Toys is puckering up and getting a big KISS.

The toy company founded by comics guru Todd McFarlane has announced that it will release a line of 6 1/2-inch KISS action figures modeled after the mega-popular, Kabuki-faced hard-rock band KISS. "The audience at KISS concerts, whether they know it or not, are in the same demographic as Spawn toy fans," said McFarlane, president of McFarlane Toys. "Plus, the KISS costumes just look like toys, and I think Gene [Simmons of KISS] was aware that we could do the line better than anyone."

KISS founding members Gene Simmons, Ace Frehley, Paul Stanley and Peter Criss will each have action figures sculpted from their likenesses. In addition, each of the four KISS figures will come packaged with a stand shaped as a different letter from the band's name. Peter Criss, the drummer of KISS, will have the "K" stand and will feature a drum/missile launcher, drumstick weapons, snap-on armor and rooted hair. KISS bassist Gene Simmons, who is sold with the "I" stand, features an axe bass, winged snake battle-staff, bat-wing cape, rooted hair and snap-on armor. Meanwhile, the Paul Stanley (frontman of the band) and Ace Frehley (KISS guitarist) packages will each include an "S" stand. Stanley comes with a shooting-star missile-launching guitar, rooted hair and snap-on blades and armor, while Ace Frehley showcases a transforming guitar/space sled, rooted hair and snap-on space armor.

"Gene controls KISS like I control Spawn," said McFarlane. "There are a lot of similarities between us that make us understand each other and play into each other's needs, so we're a perfect fit."

Scheduled for a June 1997 release, the four KISS action figures in the line will each retail at a suggested price of $7.99. ■ Matthew Senreich

SILVER SURFER GLIDES INTO TOY STORES

The Silver Surfer will be riding a new wave of popularity for his 30th anniversary.

Silver Surfer action figures based on the Marvel Comics character will be released in September from Toy Biz. A new Saturday morning "Silver Surfer" animated series will have a sneak preview special on the Fox network in November, and a second line of toys based on the show will arrive in anticipation of the series' premiere in January 1998. The initial figures in the collector's series will include Silver Surfer, Nova, Beta Ray Bill and a Meegan Alien (first seen in Marvel's classic Silver Surfer series), and each will be in Toy Biz's large 6-inch size. The exact list of characters in the animated series line has not been determined; however, some of the supporting characters in the show include Galactus, Shalla-Bal, Adam Warlock, Pip the Troll, Thanos and Nebula.

With the 6-inch collector's series, Toy Biz will adhere to the Surfer's comic book incarnation. "We tried to follow the classic feel. We didn't follow one artist in particular," said Toy Biz Junior Product Manager Carlos Lopez. The line will also include a 10-inch Silver Surfer Infinity Gauntlet figure that will have snap-on accessories and a non-reflective paint job. "It's for collectors, so we didn't use the usual super-shiny treatment," Lopez explained.

The Surfer assortment based on the animated series will include 5-inch figures, vehicles and playsets that will reflect the look and feel of the show, which is closely related to the classic vision of Stan Lee and Jack Kirby's sentinel of the spaceways. "If Kirby was alive today to animate [the show], this is what it would look like," Lopez said. "It's the very classic Surfer look."

The storyline of the animated series will center on the Surfer's adventures after he breaks free from Galactus and searches the cosmos for his love, Shalla-Bal, and his homeworld Zenn-La.

The action figure line is just the tip of the merchandising iceberg for the show. Other items on the way include novels, footwear, Franklin Mint collectibles, bicycles, sleepwear, snowboards, skateboards, underwear and hand-held games. ■ TP

TOY BIZ RESURRECTS CLASSIC 'MEGO'-STYLED SUPERHEROES

Toy Biz takes a trip back to the '70s this September with the launch of its Marvel Famous Cover series of figures.

Taking inspiration from the classic Mego World's Greatest Super-Heroes! assortments of DC and Marvel Comics characters, Toy Biz will be producing a line of 8-inch action figures, including Wolverine, Spider-Man, Storm, Doctor Doom, Green Goblin and Aunt May (who will only be available through a special mail-in offer). Like the Mego dolls of old, each Toy Biz Famous Cover figure will be super-articulated and will come complete with removable fabric outfits and authentically sculpted accessories.

The original Mego line was reknowned by fans and collectors for its high level of detail, articulation and playability, and Toy Biz hopes to recapture some of that same feel with these new figures. "With the ability we have now, we can take that Mego format and make it so much more than what it was 20 years ago," Toy Biz Product Manager Jesse Falcon explained.

And like the original Mego figures, which sported removable costumes, the new Wolverine and Spider-Man will have removable masks. All of the figures will appear in their original costumes with accessories: Wolverine has his yellow-and-blue outfit, Storm will be in her costume from Giant-Size X-Men #1 (with flowing cape and removable tiara), Spidey is in his familiar red-and-blues (with webbing under his arms) and the Green Goblin comes with pumpkin bombs and his Goblin Glider.

For the staff at Toy Biz working on this line, it has been an enjoyable experience getting back to the fun and excitement of the original Mego toys. "I had all the Mego superhero figures," Falcon recalled. "I think it will be really special when these are finished and we get to hold them in our hands. We're really excited about this line."

Toy Biz is banking on the nostalgia factor with these toys, so the company's gearing the line towards collectors. "If you look at the character lineup, it's not typical of anything we've done before, because it's so character-based," Falcon explained. "We're really listening to what collectors are saying, and we care about that. We're really trying to do things to make them very happy." ■TP

One of the famous covers Toy Biz will bring to life

Billy Tucci's popular comic book heroine will finally appear in three dimensions when Crusade Entertainment unveils the Shi action figure later this year.

The Shi figure is still in the prototype stage at this point, but Crusade has announced that it is gearing up to release a highly detailed representation of Tucci's character. The figure will stand eight inches tall, have articulation at the neck, arms and legs, and feature detailed weapon accessories and a rock garden base. There are also tentative plans to release an all-white variant figure.

Prototype design for the Shi action figure

Crusade is anxious to finally make the jump into the action figure market, and this Shi figure is the company's first step. "We just had a load of requests from people saying, 'When are you going to make Shi action figures?' and Billy just one day said, 'I'm sick of hearing this; I want to get this thing going,' " said Crusade's Assistant Editor Jeff Zapata.

Tucci worked closely with Precision Design to construct a prototype by providing initial designs and character sketches. "They've been calling every single day during the process, telling us every option we have, every detail, any ideas we can add on to the figure," Zapata claimed. "They're working very closely with Billy to try and make this as close to a Shi drawing from the comic books; they call every few seconds. They pretty much promised that it's going to be the best figure that they've made up to date."

The figure, which will come in a specially designed box, will be made available exclusively through comic book stores. Additionally, the Shi action figure will be made available in Japan in a different package through an arrangement with Horihachi Toys, Japan's oldest toy company. A number of these figures will be sold exclusively in the United States through Crusade Japan, a division of Crusade Collectibles.

Crusade hopes to launch a line of fully poseable action figures shortly after the release of the Shi action figure. These will be fully articulated and will probably include a fully poseable Shi action figure and other popular Crusade characters like Tomoe or the manga-styled Shi. ■TP

ASH MELTS THE COMPETITION

The Ash action figure

After burning up the comic book racks, the firefighting hero Ash will be setting toy shelves ablaze this summer.

A 7 1/2-inch action figure of Joe Quesada and Jimmy Palmiotti's comic book creation Ash will be released in June. The figure is being produced by Palisades Toys in association with Dynamic Forces and Event Comics (the publisher of Ash) and will have a suggested retail price of $11.95.

Co-creator Quesada can't wait to see his comic book hero come to life. "Anytime you design something and see it materialize in 3-D, it's very cool," he said. The release of the figure is part of a forthcoming wave of Ash products, including a resin statue, trading cards and an animated feature film from Steven Spielberg's DreamWorks SKG studio.

Palmiotti shares his partner's enthusiasm for the toy. "It's very appealing just to see our figure brought one more step closer to life," he explained. "It's way before cloning, but it definitely brings it off the flat page."

Both Quesada and Palmiotti had a high level of creative control in all steps of the figure's construction. Sculptor Shawn Nagle (who also designed the Ash resin statue) created the prototypes based on designs provided by the pair. "If I could sculpt, this is what it would look like," Quesada claimed. Nagle was chosen because of his ability to capture the subtle details of the character, which are familiar to readers of the comic book: the flame stripe in his hair, his oversized boots and his mysterious gauntlets. "This falls between a statue and an action figure, only because the detailing on it is a lot better than most of the toys that are being put out," Palmiotti said.

The Ash action figure will be made available exclusively to comic book specialty stores, and a special variant edition will be packed into every case of six figures. Because the toy will not be made available to large toy chains like Toys R Us, availability of the figure may be limited. But Palmiotti hopes to stock up before they run out. "I know I'm going to have a room full of them!" ■ TP

Singular Sensation

WITH 100 FIGURES AND COUNTING, HOW FAR CAN TOY BIZ GO WITH SPIDER-MAN?

By Rob Allstetter

He's 7-feet-tall, clad in silvery armor from head to foot. In a blaze of sparks, his chest arcs fire and burnt ozone fills the air. Meet…Spider-Man?!?

Actually, it's Electro-Shock Spidey. Another wacky clone of Spider-Man? Not exactly. After the poorly received "Clone Saga" in the Spider-Man comic books, Marvel Comics would just as soon keep genetic doubles as far away from the web-slinger as possible these days. The aforementioned character is actually an action figure variation of Spider-Man, a flagship comics icon who is one of today's most viable toy mainstays.

Since 1994, Toy Biz has produced more than 100 Spider-Man universe action figures—an astounding number for toys. And assortments continue to roll on, with a new selection nearly every other month.

The question is: How long can this last? After 100 figures, will new ideas become so far-fetched that a flavored Spider-Man is next?

"We don't want to do wintergreen Spider-Man," jokes Jesse Falcon, product manager at Toy Biz. "You look at any license or character that has had an elaborate toy line, they've had to be a little creative, [but] it's very important for us to keep integrity of the character in consideration because that's what has made it popular for so long.

"Batman, for instance, has worn only one or two costumes in the comic books, but [Kenner's] done over a 100 different styles of Batman [figures]. We realize we have to move like that. We just have to do it in a way that works for Spider-Man."

Adds Joanne McLaughlin, Toy Biz's vice-president of product development: "It's always a challenge with action figures to constantly make them unique from something you've done before, but that's what we're striving for."

But while the X-Men—Toy Biz's other hot Marvel Comics property—provides what McLaughlin calls a "bottomless pit" of characters and costumes to work with, there is basically just one Spider-Man. And he isn't as necessarily as variant-friendly as a Batman might be.

"Spider-Man isn't a millionaire [like Batman] who creates different suits or little gadgets for himself," says Carlos Lopez, junior product manager at Toy Biz. "You have to suspend belief a little more."

There is a concern among fans of suspending belief just a little too much, and Toy Biz is aware of this. "We've done different types of actions for Spider-Man, but now we're getting to the point where we're trying to incorporate new concepts for his costume without alienating the basic designs of the character," says Falcon.

The toy company has two ways to help facilitate that. One is to employ comic-book artists to design figures; Amazing Spider-Man's Steve Skroce did concept work for Anti-Vampire Spider-Man and Deep Sea Diver Spider-Man. "When we get artists like Steve or Art Adams [who designed the Toy Biz's initial Hulk series] involved on a design level, it adds more of an air of legitimacy in having to do variations of costumes," Falcon explains. "We get a good reaction from collectors when they hear about it and that lets us settle a little easier in the digestive systems of the purists."

Toy Biz also adds biographies on the backs of its packaging to explain the accessories or costume change—i.e. that Spider-Man seeks help from a Reed Richards [Mr. Fantastic] or a Tony Stark [Iron Man] to counteract an adversary and, therefore, dons a funky costume. But above all, the concept of a line comes first. "We make the individual characters gel with what the assortment is going to do," says Falcon. "For instance, Web Splashers is a water-based assortment so we decided to do a couple dive suits for Spidey. We can play it up in the copy on the back, explaining why he got the outfit."

[Editor's Note: See "ToyFare News" for a complete look at all of Toy Biz's new Spider-Man assortments.]

TOO MANY SPIDEYS

Generally—and a couple of assortments will break the rule this year—Toy Biz's Spider-Man assortments will include five action figures, three of which will be Spider-Man.

"We have to provide the consumer with enough Spideys," says Lopez. "If you're selling a line with the name Spider-Man, you've got to have enough material to back it up. You can't have just one Spidey."

But is there a danger of too much Spider-Man?

"There's a danger of too little, actually," Falcon says. "If we did one Spider-Man figure in an assortment where we had all villains or sidekick characters who weren't as strong as Spider-Man, typically those figures would just sit on the shelves."

While most fans would salivate at the prospect of having an assortment of villains to choose from, it comes down to a simple matter of economics and the popularity of the "Spider-Man" TV show. "It's a business decision," Falcon explains. "Sidekicks don't get as much air time as Spider-Man and therefore the majority of the people who buy our toys, the kids [ages] five and up, aren't going to recognize these characters as well as they would recognize a variation of Spider-Man."

Adds Lopez: "There might be a really cool villain—take Carrion, for example. He's a villain [comic fans like] you and I would know. But kids have never seen him on the TV show. The collector's market would eat it up, but once the collectors are done buying all the Carrions they can, there are still going to be a lot of Carrions remaining. You can do Spidey in a large quantity because kids know Spidey."

THE PLAY'S THE THING

The "Spider-Man" animated series on the Fox network is the primary feeding ground from which Toy Biz selects the characters to use in its assortments, but the cartoon's stories are having less of an effect on the upcoming lines this year.

"We did more product testing in the last year than we've in the last three combined," Falcon says. "This year we have developed focused play patterns for each assortment for Spider-Man and X-Men. We're not going to have an assortment based on, say, episode #12 of the animated series."

As a result, the upcoming Spider-assortments will be driven more by play patterns or accessories than comics events like Spider-Man's "Maximum Carnage," X-Men's "Age of Apocalypse" or Venom's "Planet of the Symbiotes."

In fact, accessories play a big part in the first big line of the year, WEB SPLASHERS. Each figure, like Deep Sea Diver Spider-Man, Shark Trap Spider-Man, Sea Hunter Spider-Man and Deep Sea Doctor Octopus, has an inflatable accessory that floats. "The one thing that tested the highest for us was water play," Falcon says. "It's surprising to see how many older kids admitted to taking their toys to the tub with them—or to the pool or beach." The highlight of this line is Black Sea Venom, a monstrous version of the symbiote with transparent shark fins and a fish head for a hand. "He's just really disgusting-looking," Falcon says, laughing.

New versions of classic Spidey-villains Rhino and Scorpion (closer to their comic book appearances than their animated versions) are prominent figures in the WEB TRAPS line, which also includes a Monster Spider-Man, a Future Spider-Man and a Spider-Man with etched-in webs. "We took some accessories for product testing this year and one was a Venus fly trap," Falcon says. "That tested through the roof. Kids loved that. So we developed an assortment where each character has a different kind of trap." Toy Biz is especially proud of the standard Spider-Man figure from the line. "It's one of the best standard Spider-Man figures we've ever done," Falcon says. "The webs are actually going to be etched-in and we're going to wipe the paint over it so all the lines on the costume are going to be brought out. It just looks spectacular."

Spidey dons transforming armor for the WEB WARS assortment, which contains five figures: Web Commando Spidey, Web Swamp Spidey, the Lizard, Vulture and Daredevil. "In the animated series and in the comic books, Spider-Man has always made things out of his webs—backpacks, punching gloves or whatever," Lopez says. "We expanded on that idea, so all the figures have gear that looks like it's made out of webbing." This gear can be removed and reassembled to create vehicles and robotic sidekicks. "The concept will do really well because transforming, as a theme, is very hot this year," Falcon adds.

The transforming accessory concept also drives the last planned assortment of the year, SPIDER FORCE, which is sure to drive kids literally buggy. "What better assortment to have than one that has a bug accessory with each figure?" Lopez suggests. "There's bug armor that each figure can wear like battle armor. You can take the armor off and, rather than discard it, you can snap the parts together to become a bug sidekick."

This line goes against all of Toy Biz's previous rules: there's only one version of Spidey [Cybersect Spider-Man] and it features obscure comic book characters like the Wasp, Beetle, Tarantula and even Swarm—characters who don't play a big role in the animated series. "Occasionally, we have to bend the rules a little bit," Falcon claims. "We get things from Marvel that are too cool not to move on, so we just had to put these characters in the line."

KID STUFF?

If it sounds like these assortments are driven toward a younger audience than the hard-core collectors, you'd be correct.

"Of the Spider-Man and X-Men lines that we have out there, 80 percent of what is sold is bought by children 16 [years] and younger," Falcon says. "The other 20 percent goes to the collectors. And, the majority of toys being bought by kids are [bought by] those 11 and younger. Those kids recognize these characters from the television show, so we have to appeal to that audience—that's basically our philosophy."

And as the Toy Biz brass explains, there's a delicate balance between pleasing both the kids who play with the figures and the growing older collector audience.

"We can sometimes be in a difficult position because we're dealing with two separate universes," Lopez says. "You have the comic book continuity and you have the continuity of the TV show. Those are two different histories, and they're both very solid.

"Sometimes what collectors as a group forget is that we're trying to do quality toys that make collectors happy, but we don't want to alienate the kids. Face it, the kids are our largest audience. But we don't forget about the collectors because we love the characters, too."

One way to please both groups is to take a character that was seen in the animated series, and make it look more like the style of the character in the comic book. Falcon points to the new Lizard, Electro, Rhino, Vulture and

Scorpion as examples. "We've done more things this year to bring the Spidey lines up and make them more true to the collector, like going back and resculpting all of the classic villains from scratch. We're trying to make that eye candy factor higher and higher."

Toy Biz also takes into account fan letters and market research; thus the Venom spin-off assortment Planet of the Symbiotes and the return of popular villains Doctor Octopus and the Lizard, all of which were in response to fans' clamorings. But Toy Biz is still concerned with creating a large variety of characters. "We have a general idea of what characters we'd like to see within the new year, but scheduling is the bigger issue. You don't want to have Doc Ock in one line and then do him again right away. We have to weigh what we do very carefully from assortment to assortment."

FANS IN THE 'BIZ

Themes for the assortments are done in-house at Toy Biz, the beginning of a nine-month process of conceptualizing, designing and sculpting to manufacturing, packaging and shipping. And for the staff overseeing Spidey, that's the best aspect of the job.

"The fun part is at the beginning when we all sit down and have a brainstorming meeting and decide what characters we're going to do," McLaughlin says.

Attending the meetings are people like Falcon and Lopez, who both previously worked at Marvel, and others with a long appreciation of the characters.

"You have to keep these guys under control," McLaughlin says. "They're looking at things from collector's standpoint. Most of the guys in these meetings are fanboys. They've been reading comic books since they were little kids and they would love to see the most unusual or odd character made.

"The meetings take a while because there's a lot to sort through. We might come up with 20 characters that we like, then we have to weed that down to an assortment of five figures."

Do these planning meetings get heated?

"Oh, yes," McLaughlin says. "If there was a character you really want to do and your boss said you couldn't, wouldn't you want to fight for it? But basically, everybody's very pleased at the end. It has to be a mutual agreement. It's a team effort that goes into making these figures."

Falcon fondly remembers a figure that didn't quite make the cut for the Arachnophobia line, where familiar Spider-Man characters were combined to create new creatures like Man-Lizard and Spider-Goblin. "Steve Skroce came up with Bull-Whip, which was a cross between the Rhino and the Scorpion," Falcon recalls. "It was the coolest thing in the world. It had these big razor-blade horns that went all the way down his back and this giant tail. Instead of having a stinger at the end of his tail, it was the Scorpion's face with these two little mutated arms coming out of the sides of his head."

Ideas that might not make the grade this time aren't necessarily buried, and with a great rogues gallery like Spider-Man, there seems to be an endless supply of characters waiting to be rendered in three dimensions. "Personally, I'd love to see Man-Wolf," Falcon reveals. "I dig werewolves and I grew up loving Man-Wolf, so if they can work him into the show we're definitely doing that."

And Falcon just might get his wish. The "Spider-Man" animated series has been renewed for a fourth season on Fox, with such toy-rich concepts of "Secret Wars" and "Six Forgotten Warriors" looming. And, of course, the live-action "Spider-Man" movie, currently still in litigation limbo, could bring a whole new source of material to the Spider-franchise. "There are some really cool ideas that haven't been made into figures yet," Falcon says. "But I'm sure we'll get to them. I see Spider-Man with quite a future." TF

Spider-Nonsense

With Toy Biz going great guns with its Spider-Man toy lines, ToyFare predicts the Top 10 Spidey figures we're pretty sure will never see the light of day.

10) Fusion: The Twin Terror

Dear God, anybody remember the premise behind this villain? Two midgets caught in a nuclear accident fuse into one highly forgettable, glowing bad-guy. Bah, midgets!

9) Slyde

What's worse than melting two midgets together? Hmm…actually, not much. Bad example. But Slyde, the "Teflon-coated" villain who could…um…slide around on his feet and stuff, was close.

8) Kangaroo

Venom. Carnage. The Kangaroo. Carrion. Which one of these seems out of place? This guy belongs in a Warner Bros. cartoon battling Sylvester.

7) The Answer

Yeah? To what…"Who's the lamest hunk of ass villain on the planet?" We re-read this guy's comic appearances for this list and we still don't know what he did. Next.

6) Spider-Clone

Uhhh, wait. Toy Biz actually made this guy. Ummm…our mistake. Sorry.

5) Rocket Racer

He rode around on a rocket-powered skateboard. That's all you need to know.

4) Aunt May & Uncle Ben Two-Pack

They're old and they're dead. Wheeee!

3) Spot

This guy could peel black spots off his body, stretch them wide and create floating "holes." What were we saying about Warner Bros. cartoons…?

2) The Enforcers Gift Set

Now you too can thrill to the adventures of Montana, Fancy Dan and the Ox!

1) Shirtless Kingpin

With real "sweats when he eats" action and authentic stretch-marks! Ugh. We're glad this list is over.

Revenge of the Jedi

TWENTY YEARS LATER, THE FORCE IS STILL STRONG WITH KENNER'S STAR WARS TOYS

Don't underestimate the power of the Force. That's Rule No. 1 for just about every toy or collectible company in today's marketplace. And it's a lesson learned 20 years ago when many of the big guns of the toy industry passed on a license that would swiftly turn the fledgling Kenner company into the juggernaut of action figures.

With a January 3rd U.S. box-office opening weekend of roughly $36 million, "Star Wars: The Special Edition" overshadowed all competition and quickly forged ahead to break the $100 million mark, showing everyone that the power of the Force is very much alive in the hearts and minds of American fans. "It's such a magical experience for someone of any age," says Tim Hall, team leader for Star Wars toys at Kenner. "It operates on a strong mythic level. I don't think anybody can go see 'Star Wars' and not be inspired." For Hall, that inspiration has catapulted Kenner to the top spot in 1996 for sales of boys' toys. And with more Star Wars action figures, vehicles and playsets to be released in 1997, it's clear to any party concerned that the toy license to have this year, the next and into the dawning millennium is Star Wars.

By Scott Beatty

THE COMPANY STRIKES BACK

After nearly a decade-long hiatus, Kenner returned to its Star Wars master toy license in 1994 and examined the possibility of bringing new action figures to life. "We were interested in going to market before we even knew about the [1994 remastered 'Star Wars Trilogy'] video release and before we knew concretely that the 'Special Edition' films would happen," says Hall. "I was going to an awful lot of collector conventions and seeing the velocity and volume of old Star Wars vehicles and figures being sold. [Star Wars items] were the most hotly pursued toys—and they had been out of production for eight years at that point. When we began discussions with Lucasfilm about relaunching, we recognized that there was a tremendous amount of demand in the marketplace for new Kenner Star Wars product."

In 1995, Kenner capitalized on that demand, due in part to the renewed interest in Star Wars sparked by the release of the Heir to the Empire novels (presenting a post-"Return of the Jedi" story). With nine figures, including Luke Skywalker, Han Solo, Princess Leia, Chewbacca, Darth Vader, Ben (Obi-Wan) Kenobi, Stormtrooper, C-3PO and R2-D2 to inaugurate the new line, as well as several vehicle releases, Kenner hit the ground running—although, as Hall recalls, the relaunch was not without just a little trepidation. Would old fans warm to the new toys? And would today's action figure fans abandon the popular superhero and monster toys in favor of the Rebel Alliance and Galactic Empire? "We always were cautious and very interested in seeing how it would perform," says Hall. "We knew there was strong collector demand out there, but we really didn't know what to expect from kids. Would they accept Star Wars, or find it something that maybe their parents or older brothers were into, but they weren't?"

Relief for Kenner came in the form of overwhelmingly positive response. "Our research told us that kids were very strongly interested in Star Wars toys at that time. And as we got into the marketplace, we realized that it was something that they could get very, very excited about, because it was a whole new generation of kids learning about this fantasy for the first time," says Hall.

For just those fans experiencing the Star Wars phenomenon for the first time, Kenner promises to continue producing some of the most popular action figures from the line's relaunch. In addition to the original nine figures, collectors and kids will still be able to find Luke Skywalker in Dagobah Fatigues, Luke in X-Wing Fighter Gear, Han Solo in Hoth Gear, Lando Calrissian, Yoda, the TIE Fighter Pilot and, of course, Boba Fett. But the best, as they say, is truly yet to come.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, 'STAR WARS'!

With a strong collector push combined with a whole new generation of fans racing straight from the 20th Anniversary "Special Edition" films to toy stores, Kenner enters the 1997 toy market with action figure assortments that literally fly off the shelves.

Already released are "New Hope" stalwarts Greedo, the Sandtrooper, Death Star Gunner, Luke Skywalker in Stormtrooper Disguise, Tusken Raider, Jawas (a two-pack) and the Droid R5-D4 (with concealed missile launcher), a subject of some controversy with its non-"movie-realistic" firing missile. "We've seen a lot of collectors dissatisfied with the missile-firing feature. On the other hand, in a lot of our child research it's been received very strongly," observes Hall, who notes that very often, Kenner must work hard to appeal to both older collectors and younger consumers. "How do we best balance the desire for authenticity versus what we loosely call 'play value'?" ponders Hall. "On one hand, R5-D4 looks just like R5-D4 does in the movie. [EDITOR'S NOTE: Except for the leg-blasters.] But for younger kids who may not be familiar with R5-D4, it's a strong toy because it has this neat [missile-firing] feature. You'll remember that R2-D2 himself is a virtual Swiss Army knife of accessories that come out and do different things across the three films. So we felt that with R5, for the older fan collector, just leave him closed—you don't need to look at that missile. And for the younger fans, you can have that kind of firing projectile play that makes action figures very fun for kids."

While R5-D4 may be a minor bump in an otherwise extremely well-received road, Kenner's first-quarter "The Empire Strikes Back" and "Return of the Jedi" offerings only reinforce the overwhelming fan support of the line. "Empire"-based figures currently available include Luke Skywalker in Hoth Gear, Hoth Rebel Soldier, 2-1B Medic Droid and the reptilian bounty hunter Bossk.

"Jedi" action figures in early 1997 include Lando Calrissian in Skiff Guard Disguise, Han Solo in Endor Gear, Bib Fortuna, AT-ST Driver and the evil Emperor Palpatine, a particular favorite of Hall. "Emperor Palpatine is truly frightening, but I think they're all pretty wonderful," he says, becoming the father reluctant to name a favorite child. "I'm also partial to the Sandtrooper. And I've always liked the Imperial Stormtroopers, which are very strong figures."

BEST OF THE BEST

As 1997 wears on, fans can look forward to even more original Star Wars figures in newly sculpted versions, as well as characters making their debut in action figure form for the very first time. Expect the following action figures to find their way into Kenner's Basic Action Figure Assortments, in addition to a few surprises:

"STAR WARS: A NEW HOPE"

Ponda Baba, the mean-spirited "Walrus Man" from the Mos Eisley Cantina, leads a lineup that includes such new offerings as Luke Skywalker in Ceremonial Outfit, Rebel Fleet Soldier, A.S.P. Droid (a new creation for the "Special Edition") and Garindan, the long-snooted spy that ratted out Luke, Ben and the Droids at Mos Eisley!

"THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK"

Han Solo in Bespin Gear will be accompanied by the fearsome bounty hunters 4-LOM and Dengar.

"RETURN OF THE JEDI"

Admiral Ackbar, the Emperor's Royal Guard, skiff guard Weequay, Imperial Snowtrooper, Yak-Face, Rancor Keeper, 9D-9 Droid, Gamorrean Guard and Nien Nunb round out the new Power of the Force figures. Kenner will also reissue the Shadows of the Empire Princess Leia in Boushh Disguise as part of its regular 1997 POTF lineup.

Adding to the Electronic Power F/X assortment (featuring action figures with "movie-realistic" lights and sounds and their own action bases), which already includes Darth Vader, Ben (Obi-Wan) Kenobi and R2-D2, are the latest offerings, Luke Skywalker Jedi Knight and Emperor Palpatine.

But perhaps the action figures to die for the most in 1997 are three characters never-before-rendered in 3 3/4-inch action figure form—each perennial nominees in Wizard: The Guide to Comics' "Wish List" of toys our fans would most love to see produced. And it's with much happiness that we report their inclusion in Kenner's 1997 POTF assortments.

First up is Grand Moff Tarkin—the first-ever action figure offering of the No. 1 bad guy in "Star Wars," as portrayed by the late and venerable British actor Peter Cushing. Why did it take Kenner so long to adapt the merciless Imperial Governor? The answer may surprise you. It seems that once, long ago, Kenner considered Tarkin not exciting enough to exist as an action figure, a belief long-since changed thanks to well-meaning fans. "The industry rules say [Tarkin's] not frightening enough to be a villain. However, we know that the Star Wars fans want that character very badly. We've gotten an awful lot of letters. We read the e-mails. We talked to a lot of people. And we walked away from a convention a year ago, shaking our heads and saying that we've got to make Grand Moff Tarkin right away. And so we're breaking traditional toy rules by doing so," says Hall.

Next is a personal favorite of Hall, Enslaved Princess Leia Organa, who was recently cemented in pop-culture history with a hilarious episode of NBC's "Friends" in which Ross (David Schwimmer) professed his desire to see Rachel (Jennifer Aniston) dressed as the bikini-clad Leia. "A variety of factors influence how we choose a figure," notes Hall. "We spend a lot of time talking with the people at Lucasfilm about what they feel is appropriate. They're truly the experts of the Star Wars universe. And their opinions weigh very heavily in what we ultimately choose."

Evidently, Lucasfilm likes "Friends," given the wonderful likeness of the Enslaved Leia.

"It's painstaking effort, in terms of very closely analyzing all the different reference material we can get our hands on. In some cases, we've actually gone to the archives at Lucasfilm and pulled out old costumes. Movie authenticity is very important for us," says Hall, who wouldn't comment on who modeled Leia's gold bikini.

And finally, a favorite of many fans, Wedge Antilles, the one Rebel pilot to survive all three Trilogy films (next to Luke, of course), is finally immortalized in plastic, arriving as an exclusive action figure with Kenner's new Millennium Falcon* Carrycase.

"My hope is that we will continue to make products that all the Star Wars fans love. We've only scratched the surface of all the wonderful characters—and that's as far as we've gotten. There are still a ton of characters we've never done before that we want to produce," says Hall.

Meanwhile, fans can already look forward to the new "premium" action figures, including the Spirit of Obi-Wan Kenobi offering from Lay's potato chips, the Cantina band member Figrin D'an (who comes with five different instruments) from the Official Star Wars Fan Club and the forthcoming Kenner Star Wars Website exclusive B'Omarr Monk action figure (Remember him scurrying around Jabba's foyer?). All, we might add, are first-ever renderings of each character.

BEASTS OF BURDEN

While the "Special Edition" releases of the "Star Wars Trilogy" provide fans a brand-new opportunity to experience George Lucas' universe on the big screen, for Tim Hall and his Star Wars team at Kenner, Industrial Light & Magic's computer wizardry makes for some pretty nifty toys. "Our focus on the 'Star Wars: Special Edition' has been that as a whole generation of wonderful characters are being brought to life on the big screen—whether the characters were on the big screen 20 years ago or are brand-new characters [hitting] the big screen—all of them represent wonderful opportunities to develop action figure versions. We're looking at every creature as a possibility," says Hall.

Already slated for this year is the appropriately named Star Wars Beast Assortment with Action Figures, featuring some familiar creatures, and others that aren't so recognizable: Jabba the Hutt with Han Solo; Dewback with Sandtrooper (who comes with gray shoulder-pads instead of orange); Tauntaun with Luke Skywalker in Hoth Gear; and the "Star Wars: Special Edition" newbie, the Ronto with Jawa. Collectors take note: All of the action figures included with the "Beasts" are re-sculpted slightly, and are therefore "exclusives."

'OFF-CAMERA' SURPRISES

Though it qualifies as a vehicle, Kenner's new Cruisemissile Trooper, an Imperial vehicle offering a pop-up figure head only, probably qualifies more as an "off-camera" item. As Tim Hall describes it, this category includes Kenner's new Deluxe Power of the Force figures, which feature such late 1996/early 1997 releases as Han Solo with Smuggler Flight Pack, Luke Skywalker with Desert Sport Skiff, Crowd Control Stormtrooper, Probe Droid with Proton Torpedo and Boba Fett with Wing Blast Rocket Pack—adaptations that never appeared in the original "Star Wars Trilogy" release, nor the "Special Edition" re-releases, for that matter. "We tend to call them 'off-camera versions,' whether they're vehicles or characters," says Hall. "If they make sense and feel like they are a part of the Star Wars universe, then they can be good toys. The Deluxe Boba Fett doesn't show up in the movies, but it does feel consistent with the character of Boba Fett: He's a bounty hunter. He's a quick draw. He's all about firepower. And that type of accessory works very well for a younger audience of Star Wars fans. So where it makes sense, we'll continue to offer something that may not have been in the movies. The purist may not agree with that approach at all times, but we're really trying to make toys for diverse generations of people."

Purists, however, might want to check out Kenner's other deluxe figure releases in 1997, including some very "movie-realistic" versions of a Hoth Rebel Soldier with Anti-Vehicle Laser Gun and an Imperial Snowtrooper with E-Web Heavy Repeating Blaster.

Our New Hopes

YEAH, YEAH, ALL THE NEW STAR WARS TOYS AND STUFF COMING OUT ARE COOL AND ALL, BUT HERE'RE THE LIST OF ACTION FIGURES WE WANNA SEE BEFORE WE GROW OLD AND DIE.

10) RANCOR

Well, duh, you need something to eat your Star Wars figures, right? And who better than the highly un-hygienic Rancor monster? Toss in dancing girl Oola as the exclusive figure and BAM!, we'd buy two.

9) LUKE SKYWALKER IN JEDI TRAINING GEAR

In his Tatooine get-up, Luke comes equipped with removable poncho and blaster-shield helmet.

8) BATTLE-DAMAGED DARTH VADER

From the end of "Jedi" comes the fallen Lord Vader with removable hand and helmet for special "My God, I'm dying" action, revealing Anakin Skywalker beneath.

7) ATTACK R2-D2

Ummm...maybe "Attack R2-D2" is too strong a description, but this li'l guy would come with a hidden lightsaber that pops up outta his noggin!

6) BANTHA

Hard to believe Kenner never made a Bantha toy. Anyhoo, this critter would come with an exclusive Tusken Raider, armed not with a goderffi stick, but with one of them keen-o Sand People rifles.

5) WAMPA

Yet another beast/action figure two-pack, this badboy would come with electronic "Wampa-growl" and exclusive battle-damaged Luke Skywalker in Hoth gear.

4) BATTLE-DAMAGED LUKE SKYWALKER

Y'know...there's no such thing as too many battle-damaged Lukes. So here's another one. Decked out in his spiffy Bespin duds, Luke looks especially worse for wear after his battle with Darth Vader, when young Skywalker got his OUCH—removable hand!

3) CEREMONIAL HAN SOLO

Remember Han at the end of "Star Wars," when he got the medal for helping blow up the Death Star? Yup, we want one of those "top-buttoned" Han Solos (with removable medal) for our very own.

2) CEREMONIAL PRINCESS LEIA

Second only in hotness to her bikini-clad suit in "Jedi," we want Leia in her squeaky-clean ceremonial dress and beehive hairdo.

1) CEREMONIAL CHEWBACCA

The catch here is that this looks just like regular Chewie and, just like in the movie, he doesn't get a medal. The moral: If someone doesn't look like you, they're not important. ●

Insets, clockwise: Power F/X Luke Jedi Knight, Millennium Falcon Carrycase with Wedge Antilles, and Figrin D'an

TERRIFIC 12-INCHERS

And for the collectors eager to super-size their action, Kenner has added to its 12-inch action figure lineup of Luke Skywalker, Han Solo, Ben (Obi-Wan) Kenobi and Darth Vader. In 1997, look for Luke Skywalker in Bespin Gear, Lando Calrissian, Tusken Raider, Chewbacca, Luke Skywalker in X-Wing Pilot Gear, Imperial Stormtrooper, Boba Fett, Princess Leia, C-3PO, TIE Fighter Pilot and Admiral Ackbar!

PLACES TO GO, VEHICLES TO GET 'EM THERE

As the amount of new Kenner action figures swells to numbers expected to rival the company's first run of Star Wars figures, fans can look forward to exciting new vehicles to build their Imperial and Rebel Fleets. As Hall explains, when it came time to relaunch the line in 1995, Kenner took a long look at the first vehicle offerings and realized that in many cases, the company had little to improve upon—and nowhere to go but up. "We discovered that a lot of our original vehicles had wonderful detail in the molds, and that if we were to reinvent the molds, we probably wouldn't do much differently. So we made the vehicles more authentic and more 'movie-realistic' by focusing on beautiful paint treatments, extensive decoration and features like real movie sounds lifted straight from the [Trilogy]," he says.

Already on store shelves are Luke's T-16 Skyhopper (the first toy replica of Luke's Tatooine flyer), Darth Vader's TIE Fighter and Imperial Speeder Bikes with either Imperial Scout Trooper or Luke in Endor Gear action figures. A third—Imperial Speeder Bike with Princess Leia Organa in Endor Gear—will also be offered in 1997.

Another large vehicle release later this year will be the A-Wing Fighter with Pilot (that figure being exclusive to the ship). Collectors will still be able to pick up earlier vehicles, including the Landspeeder, Dash Rendar's Outrider, TIE Fighter, Electronic X-Wing Fighter, Electronic Rebel Snowspeeder, Millennium Falcon, Scout Walker and Boba Fett's Slave I.

But by far, the vehicle to own in 1997 is the Electronic AT-AT Walker Playset with Figures. Priced at a whopping $74.99 approximate retail, Kenner has significantly improved the original, much coveted by kids in the early '80s and still actively sought today. With poseable legs, manually reciprocating weapons and electronic lights and sounds (including eight different phrases and sounds), the iron horse of the Empire has the most bells and whistles of any Star Wars toy. Two positionable projectile launchers, a manually operated winch, remote-operated pivoting head, exclusive AT-AT Driver and AT-AT Commander action figures and a "holographic" transparent image of Darth Vader in the passenger bay pretty much guarantee that this is one toy that won't gather dust.

And for playsets with less vehicular mobility, Kenner follows up its popular Death Star Chasm and Detention Block Escape playsets with the "Empire"-inspired Hoth Snow Battle playset (featuring a Rebel laser turret) and the "Jedi"-based Endor Ambush, recreating the Imperial Shield Bunker on the Forest Moon (Ewoks not included).

THE FUTURE OF THE FORCE

With the first release of the planned Star Wars "Prequel" films slated for 1999, it would seem that Kenner's push for product this year is an attempt to take the greatest advantage of the Star Wars master toy license while it remains in the company's possession. Though rumors abound that other toy companies are vying for the rights to produce "Prequel"-based toys (arguably one of the most desirable licenses of all time), Kenner pleads the Fifth—though an announcement answering all questions is promised to be forthcoming. In any case, Hall doesn't seem worried. "We have a very large Star Wars team mobilized, focused and energized to create Star Wars product—and I don't want to ever see that change," he says.

Star Wars' astronomical popularity aside, for Hall, the real testament of the Force's allure is its multigenerational appeal, which in many ways brings him full circle after seeing the film for the first time in 1977. "I was in Toys R Us today watching a 4-year-old and his dad both buy our toys, and that was very, very gratifying," he says. "To see something that I enjoyed in my youth with my younger brother—something that the two of us collected together—and now to be sharing that with my son and to see all these other people out with their sons and daughters, one generation introducing another generation to 'Star Wars,' is truly a wonderful experience." TF

ToyFare editor Scott Beatty once collected Star Wars figures with his older brother Dan. That is, until Dan discovered the joys of high-explosives.

The Unusual Suspects

'TOYFARE' SPOTLIGHTS THE TOY LINES FANS WANNA SEE!

You'll never find these action figures in any toy store.

We know. We tried. And while we here at ToyFare still can't believe the incredible amount of figures being offered up for the toy market (we're still numb from the announcement of a Toy Biz Swarm figure), a small handful of scalding-hot properties still exist that have yet to make it into the action figure arena.

Like what? Like what we've lined the next four pages with. Arctic-armor Batman? Swamp-flotilla Spider-Man? Yeah, they're neat and all, but here are the figures fans are really drooling for...

BATMAN: THE DARK KNIGHT RETURNS

In the near future, the Dark Knight is called out of his retirement for his final mission: Take back the streets of Gotham, put an end to the Joker and battle Superman to the death! That's the skinny from Frank Miller's ground-breaking The Dark Knight Returns, which would make for some nifty-sweet action figures!

BATMAN (at right) • The aged Batman would be ready for his final butt-whipping romp with his Batarangs, grappling hooks and detachable anti-Superman armor.

ROBIN • Carrie Kelly, the new female Robin, would be in scale to the Batman figure and come equipped with removable slingshot.

JOKER • The geriatric Joker action figure would have cracking-neck action and a floating milk-baby robot. Heck, we'll even throw in a complimentary Joker-fish.

MAGIC: THE GATHERING

With over a billion cards printed in nine languages, Magic: The Gathering is the number one collectible card game on the planet. Aided by sorcerers, knights, demons and all sorts of fantasy creatures, players battle to defeat each other in duels and rule the world of Dominia!

JEDIT OJANEN (at right) • The legendary cat warrior stands ready with sheath, long-sword and button-activated warning growl and battle-roar!

BARON SENGIR • The vampiric Lord of Darkness comes with light-up eyes, snap-on Vampire Bats and a horde of Plague Rats!

SHIVAN DRAGON • Towering over the other Magic characters is the mighty Shivan with its flapping wings, electronic roar and jaw chomping/hollow throat that can actually "swallow" other Magic: The Gathering action figures!

VERTIGO

In addition to Superman, Batman, The Flash and all the other neat comics it publishes, DC Comics also produces a line of mature comics under its Vertigo imprint, which, while featuring weirder superhero-ish characters, focuses on more adult themes and issues.

SANDMAN (at left) • Neil Gaiman's original Lord of Dreams comes packin' his removable helm, cloak and dream ruby, as well as a li'l Matthew the Raven that clips on to his shoulder. C'mon, tell us you wouldn't buy one.

DEATH • Sandman's big sister, the embodiment of Death, would come blister-packed with removable ankh, nifty top hat and assorted pigeons (So, Death likes pigeons…go figure.).

PREACHER • The Reverend Jesse Custer would be ready to kick serious arse with his button-activated light-up eyes and voice chip allowing him to say one of three random quotes: "Drop the Gun," "So who wants to get his ass kicked first?" and "Arseface!"

THE X-FILES

FBI agents Fox Mulder and Dana Scully battle against real-life monsters, aliens, the occult and the U.S. government on the Fox network to the delight of millions of fans who follow "The X-Files" TV show every week. And buy Topps' The X-Files comics. And visit X-Files Websites. And collect The X-Files cards. And, well…you get the idea.

MULDER (at right) • Ready to believe any nut-job redneck who "saw something," Mulder will tote a pistol (not that he's a very good shot) and come with a mini cryo-chamber with a frozen baby alien inside. Aww....

SCULLY (at right) • Ready to discount anything Mulder says as hooey, Scully will come with a pistol (not that she's a very good shot) and a briefcase full of "authentic" X-File documents and forensics gear.

FLUKEMAN • Eww. This radiated quasi-vertebrate flukeworm would have gross rubbery monster skin like Kenner's Jurassic Park dinosaur toys and would come with authentic New Jersey sewer slime. That's free, of course.

BABYLON 5

The denizens of the space station Babylon 5 are quickly developing a loyal cult following, and there's virtually no merchandise out there. Which means this cult sci-fi TV show is an untapped source of action figures just waiting to be exploited.

KOSH (at left) • The nice Vorlon would come with light-up eye and split-open encounter suit housing the glow-in-the-dark angelic alien within.

SHADOW • Super-articulated, this multi-legged/armed/whatever enemy beastie would come with light-up eyes and button-activated screech for real "Hey, Sheridan shot me!" action.

CAPTAIN JOHN SHERIDAN • The lone Earth hero from the Earth-Minbari War and head honcho of Babylon 5 would have a removable gas mask and light-up communicator on the back of his hand. Plus, he'll be the spitting image of actor Bruce Boxleitner!

STAR WARS: HEIR TO THE EMPIRE

Whu?!!? The Empire wasn't finished after being trampled by the Rebels in "Return of the Jedi"? That's right. In Timothy Zahn's best-selling novel Heir to the Empire, there's a whole slew of new Imperial villains making life miserable for Luke, Han, Leia and the New Republic!

GRAND ADMIRAL THRAWN (at right) • The head of the Imperial fleet when Darth Vader and the Emperor bit the dust, Thrawn would come with the rodent-like "Force-nullifying" ysalamiri critters, blaster and staff.

JORUUS C'BAOTH • The insane Jedi Master clone who sides with Grand Admiral Thrawn would arrive with snap-on Force bolts and shield.

MARA JADE • As the Emperor's former "hand," a Force-sensitive operative, the gal who gives Luke a run for his money and ends up on the side of the good guys would have a blaster and lightsaber (she kinda stole Luke's for a li'l while).

The ToyFare staff would have included an Arseface action figure with the Vertigo line...but that's just WRONG! Special thanks Craig Shutt, who customized Batman, Jedit Ojanen, Sandman, Kosh, Admiral Thrawn and Nomi Sunrider, and to Mike Maas, creator of the Scully and Mulder figures.

STAR WARS: TALES OF THE JEDI

Ever wonder what the Jedi Knights were like before the events in the Star Wars Trilogy? Dark Horse Comics' Tales of the Jedi series takes place thousands of years before Lucas' big screen saga and tells some of the earliest stories of the Jedis and the Sith Empire. Of course, none of these characters made it into the films, so they'd be perfect subjects for more Star Wars figures!

NOMI SUNRIDER (at left) • This young female Jedi would be packaged with her trusty lightsaber and some nifty light-up Adegen crystals (used in the making of a Jedi's elegant energy blade).

ULIC QEL-DROMA • Since he gives himself over to the Dark Side, this Jedi Knight would come with snap-on metallic costume pieces to simulate his transformation into the villainous Exar Kun's apprentice.

DARK LORD EXAR KUN • This Jedi was seduced by the Dark Side to become a Dark Lord of the Sith and would come with a double-bladed lightsaber and snap-on Sith amulet. TF

THE INS AND OUTS OF GETTING A TOY COMPANY UP AND RUNNING WITH THE NEWEST PLAYERS ON THE FIELD, MOORE ACTION COLLECTIBLES

"Toys, toys, toys!" Chaos! Comics owner Brian Pulido proclaims. "That's what all our readers kept telling us. That was about all the market research we needed to do."

The rest is history in progress. With the screams of his fans pushing him on, Pulido moved forward last year to bring his popular characters out of the pages of his successful line of comic books (including Lady Death, Evil Ernie and Purgatori) and literally into the hands of his fans. But he didn't do it alone.

Enter Clayburn Moore, sculptor supreme of such acclaimed cold-cast works as Lady Death and Evil Ernie for Chaos!, and the Nexus statue for Dark Horse Comics. Having earned a Bachelor's of Fine Arts degree from the University of Texas and studied classical sculpture in Italy for three years, Moore had slowly made a name for himself in the field of comic-character statues and, thanks to a friendship with Pulido, turned out to be just the right guy at just the right time. This fall will see the debut of the first line of Chaos! action figures from Moore Action Collectibles (Moore's brand-spanking new company).

But how do you get from just wanting to make action figures to getting them on the shelf? We tracked down the two players behind the next big action figure wave, and hit 'em up for some answers.

TOYFARE: First off, Clay, how did Moore Action Collectibles (M.A.C.) get started?

MOORE: In order to get to M.A.C., you have to come by way of Moore Creations, which is my statuette and collectibles business. I realized after I had done a few assignments for other companies that I needed to start my own business if I was going to get the kind of production [quality] that I wanted to achieve.

M.A.C. [was able to get] started because of the connections put in place with Moore Creations over a number of years. Since I had established a reputation for quality sculptures, I had made contacts in the action figure manufacturing industry that would help to launch my own action figure company.

One of the major contacts was Chaos!, which has a very strong fan following in the comic book marketplace. I understood the process of making action figures, but starting a company includes having a very popular license to begin with. That's what we have with Chaos! [Comics].

And since I always envisioned an action figure company that wouldn't have any limitations on them as far as sculpting goes, it became natural for the company's name to be "action collectibles" instead of "action figures."

When did the two of you decide it was time for M.A.C. to go ahead with Chaos! figures?

PULIDO: Clay and I met in June of '93, and have since had a successful business and creative relationship in producing the Lady Death and Evil Ernie sculptures. We started talking about [also producing] action figures in December of '95, and plans to go forward commenced in January of 1996. So the line has been in the works for over a year now.

What are the steps between deciding to make figures and actually producing them?

PULIDO: There's a lot of things that you have to look into, the first of which is capitalization. It almost goes without saying that it costs a lot of money to do this. We had to look at a business plan and look at the recouping [of funds]. This is a business endeavor, plain and simple. It starts with the enthusiasm, but behind it is a lot of work to make sure we break even. But don't get me wrong—we do have fun during the whole [process].

MOORE: Also, one of the big questions was insurance. The easiest way for a company to go out of business is for something to happen and a lawsuit to come up. So we had to check into insurance for a period of months while making plans.

PULIDO: You'll notice that there are a lot of other companies popping up that are making toys. I would say, by and large, they don't have the right kind of insurance protection. Toy liability is a very serious issue, especially when insurance agencies define this as a toy for children, and that's why we spent over ten months securing [insurance].

What are the main liability concerns to investigate when launching a company like this?

MOORE: The insurance question was one of the major hurdles. The next was seeing if we could get the quality of manufacturing that we need. And the third thing was how to distribute and did we have the contacts for distribution?

PULIDO: Distribution took some investigation. While Diamond Distributors gets us into the 4,000 or so comic shops, there is also a viable hobby market out there. We investigated lists of those stores to get exposure–and there are people who just sell action figures, whether they're dealers or what-have-you. We worked really hard to define our exposure to roughly 8,000 stores.

What figures did you choose to go with?

PULIDO: We kick off in fall 1997 with Lady Death, Evil Ernie, Chastity and Purgatori. Following in spring '98 will be four more figures and then four figures every six months after that, for a total of 16 figures in our first two years of operation.

MOORE: I'm sculpting the first line, which will launch M.A.C. I'll do at least part of the sculpting in the second line of Chaos! figures. The figures we end up using that I don't sculpt will be made by very talented young sculptors. We're working with some people who have done some sculpting for us before, or are currently sculpting with us now, and are of varying levels of experience in the action figure field.

With Clay's classical sculpting influences and training, what's the balance going to be between poseability and playability with your figures?

MOORE: Since these are action figures, they will have planar articulation, which means they will turn on a plane at the shoulders, hips and neck. But because of my training, my emphasis will always be on the beauty and the elegance of the human form, the power and the strength of the male and female forms—and everything that goes with it. There will be an obvious emphasis on the quality and the beauty of the sculpting and the detail involved.

Also, these figures will be in the larger-size range, roughly [McFarlane Toys' six to seven inches] Angela and Blood Queen size. Lady Death stands by herself and balances nicely, but each Chaos! and M.A.C. action figure will have a stand to ensure ease of display. Lady Death'll also have her sword, a cloth cape and sculpted hair.

Does your plan call for any special "gimmicks," like repaints or re-issues of figures with different accessories?

PULIDO: It's pretty early to disclose some things, but one thing that we know philosophically: This advent of repaints is something that's repugnant to both Clay and me. We're certainly not ruling out that we would do different things, but we do feel that there must be value added as opposed to more than just another paint job. We will do some neat stuff, which we'll announce a little down the line, but it will be with value added.

MARVEL COMICS HEROES [TOY BIZ] "They're a lot of fun, but they seem to be running out of steam a little bit. They're really starting to follow McFarlane Toys' lead by increasing the size of the characters, but I think they should concentrate more on leading the industry instead of following McFarlane." —Pulido

STAR WARS [KENNER] "The perfect example of a gem of packaging containing the absolute essence of the perfect action figure." —Moore

STAR TREK [PLAYMATES] "Generally disappointing, and I don't know why they went to larger, doll-sized figures. They do have some good sculpting on aliens, though." —Moore

SPAWN [McFARLANE TOYS] "Phenomenal work, but they're stretching the plausibility of the Spawns a little too much." —Pulido

"Some superb sculpting, but too many repaints." —Moore

TOTAL CHAOS [McFARLANE TOYS] "The most running-out-of-ideas line of characters I've ever seen. And the name? Todd should've got a clue before he did that one. But the Kiss toys, the monster dioramas—these toys are awesome." —Pulido

"McFarlane and his company are talented enough that they shouldn't need to copy anyone's ideas or anyone's names." —Moore

BATMAN: THE ANIMATED SERIES [KENNER] "Incredible." —Pulido

SUPERMAN: THE ANIMATED SERIES [KENNER] "Needs some more time under its belt to match the quality of the Batman figures." —Moore

BATMAN: TOTAL JUSTICE [KENNER] "The sculptor knows their anatomy, but relies too heavily on it. The characters look flayed alive–like their skin has been removed–giving them an unfinished look. But the anatomy is correct, and the sculptor has a flair for the dramatic." —Moore ■MB

MOORE: It would be easy for me to sit here and say that M.A.C. will absolutely never do repaints, because we won't.

However, with that said, we can get into a bit of a problem in that we'd like to start an action figure fan club. If you're only going to be doing 10,000 to 20,000 figures for a premium or a magazine giveaway, you absolutely cannot make only 10,000 or 20,000 figures of a brand-new figure. It's absolutely cost-prohibitive. So for premiums and giveaways, we may do a very limited number of repaints just for that particular promotion. But as far as taking the molds from a figure already done and giving Lady Death a red bikini instead of a black bikini and selling her again, you won't see it from M.A.C. You can write that in stone.

You're making these figures available exclusively through comic, hobby and specialty toy shops. Why?

PULIDO: Basically, we're not looking to be in Wal-Mart or Kmart. That allows us to have the characters be more of what they're really like in the comics. The comics' Lady Death has a voluptuous [Marilyn] Monroe-esque form, and we will match that. We'll have the [demonic] form of Purgatori and the insidious quality of Evil Ernie, which would have to be toned down for those stores.

MOORE: We're not really doing these things for kids—we're making figures for the mature collector. Anytime one of these pieces ends up in a kid's hands, I want the parents to be fully aware that this is not something that we expect kids to play with. The Lady Death action figure will look like she does in the comic. I want to be very clear on that: These are action figures for the mature collector.

Later on, if M.A.C. has an opportunity with another popular license, we'd have to consider wider distribution at that time. But at this point, we're talking specifically about action figures made for the collector's market.

PULIDO: Additionally, our price point is at $9.95, and our promotion will be geared towards collectors [ages] 18 and above, so while the figures won't say "adults only," which would be inappropriate, I don't see these getting into kids' hands that easily.

This distribution plan raises a few questions. Aren't there fewer comic and hobby shops out there than Wal-Marts? Would this smaller distribution make this action figure a collectible?

PULIDO: We're not trying to falsely create collectibles, we're trying to get material out there that people enjoy. As best as we are able, everyone will get a fair shot at getting the Chaos! figures. As you can imagine, we want to sell the most amount of figures as possible.

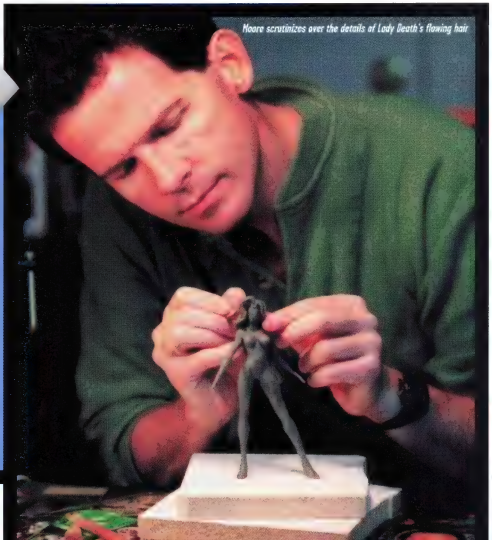
We've been talking at length with other distributors to insure we get the best possible market penetration. Product availability is something we're taking pretty darn seriously, and we're going to try to make sure we have a fair and equitable distribution of this stuff.

MOORE: First and foremost, we want these to be accessible. We will offer the figures first to all the comic and collector's shops, and then M.A.C. will have a very active mail-order department. We're hoping to sell these figures at $10 each or thereabouts, because we want everyone that could possibly want them to get the figures initially. After that, if it's six months down the road and Lady Death is $25 [in the secondary market], I can't help that.

I should mention that we plan on numbering these figures, and we will cap them out at a certain amount. You won't see us going back to the well and flooding the market several months later with what was once a collectible figure.

When the dust settles, and all the smaller companies that are making toys come and go, M.A.C. will still be here.

–Chaos! Comics president Brian Pulido



Moore scrutinizes over the details of Lady Death's flowing hair

Do you have any idea what the production runs will be for each figure?

MOORE: We would like to cap the U.S. market on these around 200,000 figures. My feeling is that if we make between 80,000 and 200,000, we would cover the market pretty well. If this thing takes off, we will do the full 200,000. If our estimated demand only calls for 100,000 Lady Deaths, we'll do 100,000. You'll never see a situation where we'll do only 1,500 or 2,000 of anything, unless it's an advertised premium.

PULIDO: Yeah, philosophically, I make crazy comics, but tend to be very conservative in business, while Clay tends to have a conservative exterior, but is willing to take more risks. Combining our different business philosophies has helped us to hit the numbers right before. And we stay up late at night playing with the numbers, so we're not just guessing here.

Any decisions on the allotment of figures per case, or collation?

MOORE: There will be twelve figures per case. We're still talking about case assortment, though. I think we'll have a huge demand for Lady Death, so that's the big question: Do we ship a higher percentage of Lady Death than the others figures per case? We don't want to flood the market with Lady Deaths, but there are people out there who will just want to get a Lady Death and not want the rest of the assortment. A final decision hasn't been made yet.

What's the plan for the package design?

PULIDO: All the packaging will feature exclusive artwork by the artist most commonly associated with the character: Steven Hughes will provide artwork for Lady Death and Evil Ernie, Jim Balent will do Purgatori, and Justiniano will do Chastity. They're going to look great.

Also, I can't stress this enough: This company is Clay's. We're working in association with him. I certainly have an interest in the company and its outcome, and I am Director of Marketing and Promotion for the Chaos! line, but this is Clay's baby, so the packaging will clearly say "Moore Action Collectibles."

Then what else can we expect from the "Moore Action Collectibles" label in addition to the Chaos! characters?

MOORE: While I can't mention any names yet, promising negotiations are in the works with other creators that we've worked with through Moore Creations and others. If M.A.C. is anything like Moore Creations, the quality of our work sells itself, and that's why the negotiations are going very well with other folks.

Our plans with Chaos! run for the next three years at least, and naturally the Chaos! line will be an advertisement for M.A.C. So if there are any creators out there who'd like to see their character created as an action figure as good as it possibly can be, and be assured of the highest degree of marketability in the collector's market, then we're the people to talk to.

What can we expect to see during three years of Chaos! toys?

PULIDO: The sky's the limit. We had a session where we thought of all the possibilities for other figures, and we thought of all kinds of neat things we can do. We might give Evil Ernie a flame-thrower, put together an "Apocalypse Now" set…or whatever. One of the things we're trying to be aware of is meeting our goals the first time out and making the most beautiful, sculpted action figures ever to appear on the market.

MOORE: There will be future incarnations of Lady Death in new costumes. One figure I'm really looking forward to sculpting is Lady Death in her full battle armor. I'd like to use some real hair with that, so we might see synthetic hair with the Lady Death in full armor since she has a ponytail coming out of her helmet. Otherwise, we can create just about whatever Chaos! wants. It's wide open.

It sounds like M.A.C. is here for the long haul.

PULIDO: When the dust settles, and all the smaller companies that are making toys come and go, M.A.C. will still be here. By the time next year rolls around, M.A.C. will be working on even more exciting licenses, and working with superior sculptors. What excites me most about this is personally knowing that Clay is one of the most moral and ethical people in the industry. And he just loves the hobby. So I know that you can expect phenomenal toys, responsible marketing, non-manipulation of the consumer and just plain amazing sculpting. This line will be the start of something really cool. TF

STEP #1: 'Padding' the Parts

To begin the transformation, we'll start with the body. Much like a pre-Captain America Steve Rogers, our raw recruit is clearly not in any shape for this man's army!

I call the first step "padding" a part. This means taking an original piece and building it up in order to make a mold which will provide our final part. With regular non-hardening clay, sculpt your figure's desired build and you're ready for mold-making.

Your average Mego's a bit too scrawny to make the grade as Super-Soldier, so "padding" and replacement parts are a must

Of the Mego parts, I pad the feet first to increase the overall size and make them look more "boot-like" in a stocking-toe costume, as well as filling out the crotch area (he is *Super-*Soldier, after all).

Other parts we'll be using for this project are scalped from other figures. The arms are duped from an LJN S.W.A.T. figure, which interchange easily with Mego parts.

The original LJN part swivels, and we're going to use this for the right arm, since that's his "shield-holding" arm. We'll need resin duplicates that we'll modify for added poseability. I'll show you exactly how to make molds later on. Other parts we've collected, we'll have to re-tool. Since our base Mego figure has the chest of a 98-lb. weakling, we'll just replace the chest completely.

The chest we'll be using is from one of the multitude of different characters Remco used this chest for. It's off the company's standard "He-Man" knock-off body. To make it fit on our Mego body, we'll do some retooling. Begin by removing the head, arms and legs.

To remove the chest from the waist, wedge a hacksaw between the two and saw. Once separated from the rest of the body, the chest should be hollow. We'll fill the piece with non-hardening clay and make a resin dupe later on.

The last part we'll use is the ball from the waist of a Mego female figure. Again, we'll be making a copy of the ball.

Before making your molds, you'll need to pad your parts and glue them to a laminated board (below)

STEP #2: Use Your Head

Since Super-Soldier's head is sculpted from scratch, that's where you'll spend most of your time. Take a ball of Super Sculpey and form it into the shape of a head, with a long neck flattened off at the bottom. With a clean-up tool, make impressions where the eyes will be, and a slit in the position of the mouth. This will give a clear indication of where to place our nose and ears. When doing facial sculpture, keep the following in mind: The corners of the mouth should fall under the center of each eyeball; the nose should be centered above the mouth; and the ears should be approximately halfway back on the head and centered between the eyebrow and the tip of the nose.

Once you've got your head and neck set-up with rough placement of features, you can trim the Sculpey here and there until you get the look you envision. Reference Super-Soldier #1 for important details like the mask, hairdo and facial expression.

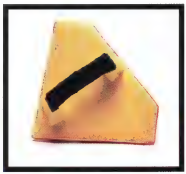
While sculpting, it's important to look at your head from all angles. Lighting is a valuable ally in correctly establishing proportion. Shadows will point out "hills" and "valleys" that can make your head seem misproportioned. And remember, no face is perfectly symmetrical—one eye may be lower than the other.

Once you're satisfied with your sculpt, it's time to "cure" your sculpture in a standard kitchen oven. Curing will harden the sculpt to a finished product for mold-making. Preheat the oven to 275 degrees and then place the head on a cookie sheet in the center of the oven. A piece of Sculpey the size of a Mego head won't take long (5-10 minutes) to cure. Watch the head-to-be closely; overheating will damage our hard work.

You'll need to make a mold of the rough sculpture, and from there, a Hydrocal plaster duplicate to further refine by carving or sanding. I personally find it easier to modify the plaster dupe than to use the clay sculpt as the final product, especially on fine details like teeth, facial wrinkles, mask lines and hair.

STEP #3: Shield's Up!

At your local hobby shop, pick up some sheet styrene. Take a very thin piece and trace the shield logo onto it with transfer paper. Cut out where the yellow areas should be, and then the outside shape. This is glued to a thicker piece of sheet styrene and the overall shape is cut out. Add small squares of resin to the back of a resin copy of the shield. These will function as strap moorings. Make sure the shield's sanded smooth.



Carefully paint the shield and glue on the elastic strip

Then spray it with sandable primer; use white primer so the colors will cover it easily. A couple of light coats will work better than one heavy coat. After the final coat has dried, spray the whole shield with yellow. Again, use thin coats to build a deep, even color. Let it dry somewhere safe and don't touch it for at least 12 hours! Once dry, paint the red areas on the shield with a paintbrush. Several coats may be necessary. When dry, spray the front of the shield with spray varnish. Once dry, scrape the yellow off the tops of the moorings. This will give the glue a better sticking surface. With Zap-A-Gap, glue a 1/2"-wide elastic strip perpendicular to the moorings.

STEP #4: Making Molds

Our process here will involve making two sets of molds, one rough set and a final set. You can (and will) use these steps to make molds for all the parts needed.

To begin, we'll need more non-hardening clay, Mold Builder, disposable paint brushes, silicone glue, a square of laminate board and baby powder. Begin by adding a little non-hardening clay to the piece you're working on, to give it some cushion for casting. Since these will be one-piece molds, the mold opening needs to be placed in an unobtrusive place that can be tooled over later. Glue these pieces to a laminated board with silicone glue. Now you can begin building your mold!

With a disposable paintbrush, paint the rubber latex over the parts. Keep the first coat thin and work it into all the details of each part, making sure you cover the entire part as well as about an inch around the part. Let the rubber dry for roughly about 15 to 30 minutes, then give it another thin coat. Do this six to seven times, until your part and the area around it is thick enough to hold its shape. Let it sit for at least 24 hours. After the molds are dry, dust them with baby powder.

This will keep them from sticking to themselves—the molds should "roll" off the parts. Now we've got our set of rough molds done, and we're ready to pour our Hydrocal dupes. As I mentioned already, these dupes will be easier to work with as far as detailing is involved.

The only difference to our final molds is that we'll need to pour resin dupes instead, because they're much more sturdy and durable. Since resin heats up as it cures, though, it is hard on your molds and can even destroy them. I have found that "curing" the molds themselves—by pouring five or six Hydrocal dupes for each part—somehow causes the molds to vulcanize or toughen up. The mold will turn whitish, but as it dries it'll revert to its normal color. At that point, you're ready to pour your resins!

Use a shading flesh to paint the lips. Also, a wash of shading flesh applied to the nostrils, the indentation under the nose and the chin cleft will add depth to the flesh.

Once your paint is dry, give the head a few thin coats of Testors dull cote. This will protect your paint job from finger oils and the like.

Finally, paint the eyes and lips with an acrylic high-gloss lacquer. This "wet look" will make them stand out against the matte finish of the head.

Make sure your molds are COMPLETELY dry. Even the tiniest bit of moisture will cause the resin to "foam up" and expand. Turn your molds inside-out and dust them with powder. This helps "chase" air bubbles out and protect the mold from the heat of curing.

To create the resin, take two unwaxed Dixie cups and pour an equal amount of prepolymer in one and curative in the other.

Pour the chemicals back and forth until mixed. Pour a little of the mixture into your mold and work the resin completely around the inside of the mold, working the air bubble out. Place the mold in the cradle and fill it with the rest of the resin. Give the resin a few minutes to cure and then remove it from the mold. It will still be soft enough to trim the excess with heavy-duty scissors.

It takes a steady hand (and a dremel tool) to sand, cut and rout your parts, like the chest and waist ball (above) and the crotch piece (progression shown at upper left)

STEP #5: Making a Cast

In this section I'll be introducing two different casting materials: Hydrocal and Por-A-Kast. These materials are for the serious modeler. Two parts Hydrocal to one part water is a good recipe for strong castings.

[Important note: Wear a mask that filters out dust particles whenever you're exposed to Hydrocal dust! While casting or tooling, YOU SHOULD AVOID BREATHING IN THIS DUST.]

A helpful tool in pouring Hydrocal dupes is a vibrating massager. Hold the mold against the massager as you fill it. This will vibrate air bubbles to the top. Squeezing and releasing the mold as you pour will also help you get air bubble-free Hydrocal casts.

So you've got a mold full of fresh plaster. Now you need a casting cradle to hold your molds. This is made by simply cutting holes in a box that your molds will go into, but won't fall through. The idea is to suspend your filled mold upside-down.

Por-A-Kast is the most valuable material I've run across. It makes quick, strong castings, is easy to work with, and holds small details very well. Before you start, read all safety precautions on the packages! You DON'T want this on your skin. When working with Por-A-Kast, wear a respirator for fumes and work in a well-ventilated area. Be sure to wear disposable plastic gloves.

Once the figure's eyes have been painted white, paint the pupils similarly sized and centered, and put a smaller dot of black in the center of each eye. This will help give the eye a focus. Next, add an even smaller dot of white to one side of the black dot. Use a pin for this.

STEP #6: Tool Time

The dremel tool is your friend! A dremel is a hand-held tool that can sand, grind, polish, sharpen, cut or rout, depending on the tip you have in it. Like a drill, you put the bit in and the dremel spins it at various speeds. As covered in the section on casting, don't inhale Hydrocal or Por-A-Kast dust. With this in mind, wear a mask while tooling either product.

Eye protection is important while running a dremel. Also, we'll be tooling small parts, which means working with the spinning blades close to our fingertips. You may want to wear heavy leather gloves for protection.

Bits we'll need include: barrel sanders, high-speed steel cutters, sanding tips and cut-off wheels. For the rough clean-up, we'll use our electric dremel with a barrel sander. Use this to grind off any excess resin you can't trim off with scissors.

After you're done cleaning your parts, we'll change over to our large high-speed cutter. This is the tip we'll use to rout out the inside of the chest, waist ball and crotch. We'll also use it to rout a hole in the bottom of the head in order to accommodate the elastic which holds it on.

Heads up! You'll need to rout the head, insert a brass rod into it and loop some elastic over the rod, if you want your Super-Soldier's head to connect to his body.

Next we'll be using a cut-off wheel. By putting four wheels on one tip, cut a slot for the elastic on the dupe bicep we've made. During this step, wear goggles, as this creates lots of dust. I prefer the manageability of the mini-mite for our next steps. We'll need a drill bit that's approximately the same size as our brass rods. Laying the rod down on a cutting mat, roll an X-Acto back and forth on the rod at about 3/8" to 1/2" increments. The pieces will then snap off to give us pegs for our arms and heads.

With the drill bit, start at the back of the arm, and drill across the slot and halfway through the front. This way, the peg won't poke through, and a drop of Zap-A-Gap will keep it from backing out. With the head, I start on the left, drill through one side across the hole (at the head's bottom, in the neck) and halfway through the other. Push a brass peg into the hole, and again a drop of glue will keep the peg in place. The reason for this peg in the head is to help connect the head to the body, as well as making it easier to paint.

With a fine grit tip, go over all tooled areas to grind down any imperfections. After a final sanding with a fine grit sandpaper, you should have a batch of tooled parts ready for final assembly and a head ready for the paint job.

STEP #7: Painting the Head

The next step is the paint job. After our head has been tooled and fine-sanded, string a 4" to 5" piece of elastic over the brass rod and tie one knot close to the head. Leaving a couple of inches, tie two more knots so there's a loop at the bottom. This enables us to hang the head upside-down to dry. Begin with a couple coats of white primer. After it dries, mask off the hair with masking tape and airbrush the rest of the head blue. After your blue base coat is dry, peel off the masking tape and repair any overspray by painting it over with white. Next, paint the entire hair area a dark yellow. Use a rigid brush and be mindful of working the paint down into all the details of the hair. Once this is dry, we'll "dry-brush" over it with a light yellow. "Dry-brushing" means to dip your brush (generally a wide, soft brush) into your paint, wipe off most of the paint with a rag and then stroke your brush back and forth on a piece of paper. Now lightly brush over the dark yellow of the hair. That way, the more protruding areas are highlighted while the base color is preserved in the deepest details. Remember, since you're not using a lot of paint, a dry-brush finish needs to be built up by going over it several times. Finish off with a very light dry-brush of white. After our hair is complete, take a fine-tip brush and carefully paint all exposed flesh.

When the flesh around them has dried, use a brown "wash" to outline the eyes. A "wash" is a mixture of water and very little paint. It's so thin, it will "wash" down into the grooves around the eyes.

STEP #8: Sewing the Costume

For this job, you'll need scissors, a marker, spandex (red, white and blue, naturally), a red fabric marker, a sewing machine, Super glue gel, a needle and invisible thread.

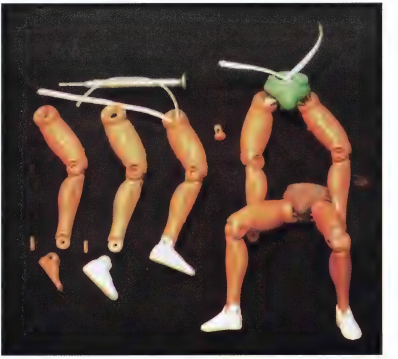
To begin the costume, you'll need a pattern. Mego Superman and Captain America costumes provide the perfect pattern. Since you'll have to take them apart, look for costumes in bad shape (but not torn to shreds). With an X-Acto knife, disassemble each costume. Pay attention to your work: You'll essentially be working backwards when you put the new costume together. Follow these basic steps:

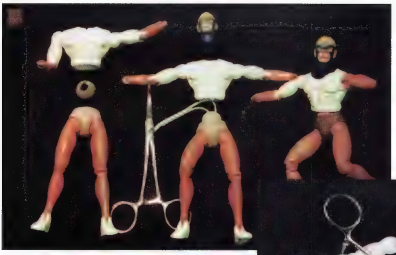
1. Turn costume inside out.
2. Start at one toe and cut threads around inseam (from toe to toe).
3. Rip out (that's a sewing term, meaning to carefully remove the thread) the thread down the back.
4. Remove belt.
5. Rip out along waist.
6. Take legs off Supes' trunks.
7. Rip out seam from wrist to waist.
8. Rip out seams around neck and sleeves.

When you've finished, lay your pieces out on paper and trace around the outline of each, keeping all pieces flat. You'll need to trace Supes' costume from the waist down and Cap's from the waist up.

Before you cut out your patterns, you'll customize the costume slightly. Extend the leg piece a little longer (That's because we padded the feet, remember?) and cut the pattern at the knee. Leave the bottom section as a separate pattern in order to make the boot. In this manner, you've modified the pattern to give us a built-in boot. Now cut out the pattern.

Talk about a groin pull! After adding the new feet and attaching the legs to the crotch piece with elastic, Super-Soldier's halfway home.





After piecing the arms and chest together (below), it's time for the final assembly (left). If it turns out well, maybe you'll even give Super-Soldier his hands back.

[Warning: Spandex gets pulls in the fabric if it snags on anything. Make sure your hands are clean and smooth. Likewise, it's important to have a clean, smooth work area for this part.]

Spread your fabric out before you. Arrange the appropriate patterns on their proper colors (again, use the Super-Soldier comic for reference) and trace. Next, you'll want sharp scissors to cut out your pieces. Once you've cut out all your fabric, thread your sewing machine with invisible thread, which saves you from having to switch colored threads for each piece you sew.

Start by hemming the sleeves. Then sew from the wrist down; sew the striped area to the chest piece, and hem the back from the bottom of the striped area to around the neck. Now, sew the leg to the boot, and then the legs to the trunks. Next, attach the chest piece to the top of the trunks and sew down the back of the trunks. Lastly, sew from one toe around to the other. In order to make the costume tighter, sew in a little further from the side. Now, turn it outside-in and see how you did.

STEP #9: Piecing it All Together

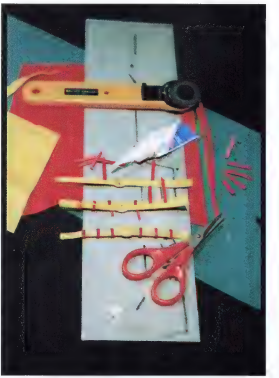
Begin the next big step by taking an old Mego apart. Discard the parts we won't need (which is actually almost everything, except the legs and forearms), as well as the rubber pieces and hooks that hold the doll together.

Cut several pieces of 3" to 4" elastic. String one piece around the hip pin and through the hole in the leg. String one end of the piece up out of the crotch and loop the other end through the first leg's hole and tie it off tightly to the first end. You can attach your retooled feet at this point.

There is a support bar running through the middle of the crotch. Make sure your copy (if you made one) also has this bar, as that's how we'll ultimately connect the head and hold the doll together.

Next, loop a piece of elastic through one of the arms. String one end across the chest and out through the arm hole, and the other out through the neck. Loop the end sticking out through the opposing arm hole through the arm and then out through the neck. Now tie it off to the other end.

You should now have a chest section and a "waist-down" section. Next, we'll need to cut a small circle of thin leather that will act as a cushion between the head and the chest. This will act to protect the elastic from the head down through the chest and through the waist ball. String one end of the head's elastic down through the crotch, around the support bar and back up through the ball. Now tie it off to the other end of the head's elastic. This basically forms a complete elastic circle from head to crotch.



Unless you want Super-Soldier's pants to fall down (Hmm...), you'll need to make a belt

You should now have a complete figure ready to dress. But first, we'll take our minimite and grind down the mold lines down the front and back of the Mego legs. Make sure there's nothing to snag the costume on as you dress your Super-Soldier. Remove the hands, so it's easier to put on the costume. After slipping the assembled figure into his costume, thread some invisible thread onto a needle and sew up the back of the costume. Now you can reconnect the original hands, or any replacement hands you made.

STEP #10: The Final Details

For the belt, use a rotary cutter to cut a strip of yellow leather. Lay your leather out flat on a cutting board and lay a straight edge, close to the edge. Establish a straight cut. Now, slide your straight edge back enough to cut a strip that will fit through our buckle. (Since it's next to impossible to find these mini-belt buckles in a regular store, I suggest using the Kathy's Creations store I list in the "Parts is Parts" sidebar.) Also cut some strips of red about 1/8" or less wide for his belt loops.

Now, paint your miniature buckle yellow. After it's dry, slide it onto the yellow belt. Cut your red strips of leather into six to eight pieces. Begin by gluing, face up, the red strips of leather to the back side of the belt, in even increments on either side of the buckle. Then stretch them around the face of the belt, trim off the excess, and glue down the other side.

Put a dab of Super glue at the front center of the waist of your Super-Soldier figure, and press the underside of the buckle into the glue. Now stretch the ends of the belt around the back of the figure and trim off the excess, letting one end overlap slightly. Then just glue it in place.

The cuffs on the boots can be fashioned out of excess red leather and glued into place.

Finally, the last thing to do is put the stars on the costume. For this, we'll use some 3M sign vinyl. You've probably seen people driving around with messages across their windshields. Well, the same place that cuts these custom messages can cut some stars for you or sell you some scrap vinyl you can use to design your own stars.

Trace out your shape on the vinyl. This stuff is very thin, so it's easy to cut.

Cut out your star, peel off the backing and place it on the chest. Once positioned, hold a blow dryer on it and gently rub it down. Repeat for the star on the hero's back. The heat helps the vinyl's adhesive activate, and also allows your star to conform to the contour of the body.

Now step back and look at what you've accomplished. If you've followed all our steps like a good soldier, you can stick out your chest and hold your head high, 'cause now you're one of the few, the proud, the Mego Marines! Congratulations, troops! Now get out there and do your drill instructor proud!! TF

Charlee Flatt would like to thank his ultra-patient wife, Jim and Connie Klein, Scott Arendsen and Tom Nagy for all their help in making this feature (and figure) possible. He also points out that if you're a younger kid, you need to have your mom or dad help you when building your Mego.

Homemade Heroes

Sponsored by LEGENDS OF 3 DIMENSIONS & TOY BIZ

THE CRÉME DE LA CRÉME OF FAN-MADE ACTION FIGURES

Every day, ToyFare receives more and more letters and photos from fans who make their own customized action figures 'cause the various toy companies haven't gotten 'round to making their favorite characters. In "Homemade Heroes," we pick the best of the best, publish the pics and send the winners cool free stuff. This time, fans whose entries see print each win a pair of 5-inch Marvel action figures from Toy Biz. The Grand Prize Winner takes home the super-size package: a 10-inch Marvel Universe action figure from Toy Biz... and an all-new Green Goblin statue from Legends in 3 Dimensions!

A BIG CONGRATS TO ALL OF OUR WINNERS!

MAGOG

Ken Goach, Austin, Texas

It's sort of fitting that this Magog figure was made from a Toy Biz Stealth Cable and Cyborg Cable, since this Alex Ross and Mark Waid creation from DC Comics' hugely popular Kingdom Come mini-series was based on Marvel's time-lost mutant. The whole thing was topped off with a Toy Biz Magneto helmet, a little Super Sculpey and some paint.

PLASTIC MAN

Brian Heiler, Whitby, Ontario, Canada

Plas here was slapped together from various Mego bodies, with a head built from scratch out of Milliput modeling compound. His stylin' outfit was made from real, authentic Spandex ('cause it's stretchy, y'know). Too bad Plas here wasn't made from a Stretch Armstrong figure....

LEGION OF SUPER-HEROES

Mike Nowak, Boulder, Colo.

Here's the rundown on how Mike made his versions of DC's superteens from the 30th century: Chameleon is a Toy Biz Super-Poseable Spider-Man; Shrinking Violet is a repainted Toy Biz Spider-Woman; Live Wire is made from a 'Biz Spider-Man and a Transforming Lamont Cranston from Kenner's The Shadow line; Cosmic Boy is a retooled Toy Biz Silver Surfer; Andromeda and Kinetix are both repainted Toy Biz Phoenix figures; and Brainiac 5 is made from a Toy Biz Mr. Fantastic. Superboy is unchanged from Kenner's Superman: Man of Steel line, and we have no clue what Saturn Girl is made from because Mike's a weenie and didn't tell us. But otherwise, great job, Mike!

KERMIT SPAWN

Lukas Kristjanson, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada

Awww…how cute! We wonder how Miss Piggy would feel if she knew her beloved Kermie was a Spawn from hell. This li'l guy was made with a McDonald's Happy Meal Kermit the Frog and some parts from a real Spawny-Guy action figure.

THE SUPERHEROES' LAST SUPPER

Jesse Gonzalez, Anaheim, Calif.

Here's a scene you never saw in Marvel Versus DC. Is it sacreligious or just plain funny? Who cares—it's just a nifty ceramic sculpture customized with modeling clay and repainted to bring the Big Two's characters together for their own last supper.

ZSASZ, BANE & COMMISSIONER GORDON

Daniel Soucy, Montreal, Quebec, Canada

Looking better than any of the other Kenner Bane figures, this pumped-up Bane was made from an old Mattel Masters of the Universe He-Man body, a Toy Biz Spider-Man head and some leather. Zsasz was made from Kenner's Batman Returns Bruce Wayne/Batman figure, and Commissioner Gordon comes from a Toy Biz DC Super-Heroes Two-Face body, a Toy Biz Magneto I head and a coat from Mattel's 12-inch Battlestar Galactica Starbuck.

WONDER WOMAN

Peter Temple, Vallejo, Calif.

This here buffed Wonder Woman action figure is just a repainted She-Dragon from Playmates' Savage Dragon line. WW's lasso? Try a length of gold shoelace.

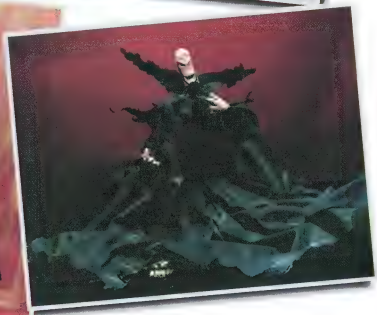
Ryan Jones, Corvallis, Ore.

Professor X's former main squeeze was pieced together from Toy Biz's Phoenix and Sunspot figures and a Playmates Star Trek Dax figure. Various parts (like that funky bird-plume hairdo) were made from Sculpey, while a piece of lace was used for her cape.

MR. GONE (below right)

Nick Floyd, Albuquerque, N.M.

Think you know what this Mr. Gone figure was made from? Well, your guess is as good as ours, because Nick didn't fill us in on how he created this Maxx villain. However, it looks like it's just some modeling compound and a whole mess of fabric. Cool enough to make the "Homemade Heroes" cut in any event, though.



GRAND PRIZE WINNER

BLADE RUNNER

Danny Wagner, San Rafael, Calif.

As if he didn't get enough of this stuff at his day job as a model maker at George Lucas' Industrial Light and Magic, Danny Wagner loves to create homemade action figures. Take these Grand-Prize-winning Blade Runner action figures, for instance. Danny constructed them at home after a 10- or 12-hour work day, during which he sculpted stuff like that nifty new Tauntaun skull in the Wampa cave from the Special Edition release of "The Empire Strikes Back" or that new green harmonica-playing alien in the Max Rebo Band (check him out in Jabba's palace in the Special Edition of "Return of the Jedi").

Since Danny works on big-name movies like these, why choose a cult film like "Blade Runner" for homemade action figures? "It's been one of my favorite science-fiction films of all time, and I've always wanted them to bring out a toy line, but they just never did," he explains. "I was always disappointed, so I decided to just do it myself."

All of these figures were sculpted completely from scratch, using prototypes made from Super Sculpey and silicon molds. They were also all made at the same time, so a uniform scale could be worked out. The final figures were cast in a urethane resin and painted using an airbrush and a dry brush. Danny used photos from old movie magazines and a videotape of "Blade Runner" to get the likenesses right, and even referred to a replica of the gun used by Deckard (Harrison Ford). Most of the other accessories, like Pris' (Daryl Hannah) handbag and Roy Batty's (Rutger Hauer) bird, were also hand-sculpted, except for the dancer's see-through dress, which was cut from a shower liner (Kinda fitting if you've seen the movie, huh?), and Chew's eye-maker, which was made from leftover model pieces. Getting all the details on that machine was a bit of a challenge. "For the clear chamber on the side, I took some small bottles and cast them in clear resin," he reveals. "When the resin was curing, I slipped in little plastic eyeballs."

RACHAEL

ROY BATTY

In the future, Danny hopes to create more little-known movie characters like Sarah Connor (from the "Terminator" films), the "Young Indiana Jones Chronicles" characters and creatures from Ridley Scott's "Legend." "I think it's a nice little break when I can get off of work and do something I like a lot," says Wagner. "This has basically been my hobby, and it turned into a career. People ask me why I don't go out and do something or get a life, but this is what I do and I enjoy it." TF

HOW DO YOU ENTER?

Simple. Just build your own Homemade Hero(es) out of other toys, sculpt 'em out of clay—heck, use Spam…we like Spam. Then take several photos of your character, but make sure the pics are in clear focus and in color (NO POLAROIDS, BY GUM!). On the back of each photo, attach a list of what you made your figures from, as well as your name, full address and phone number. Then mail the whole shebang to:

Top 10 Hottest Action Figures

BY CONTACTING HUNDREDS OF RETAILERS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY, TOYFARE KEEPS A CLOSE EYE ON THE COUNTRY'S HOTTEST COLLECTIBLE ACTION FIGURES. AND, WELL, HERE THEY ARE...

1. THE SPIRIT OF OBI-WAN KENOBI (STAR WARS: POWER OF THE FORCE)

With this sucker either shipping or due to ship any day now, fan anticipation is at an all-time high. As one of the four figures fans have wanted for decades (along with Darth Vader with removable helmet, Grand Moff Tarkin and Slave-girl Leia, the latter two actually under production), Spirit Ben is an exclusive Lay's Potato Chips mail-in offer (for just two specially marked Lay's proofs-of-purchase and $1.99) similar to last years Fruit Loops mail-in offer featuring the now $30 Han Solo in Stormtrooper Disguise. And hey, next to 2-1B's tummy, he's the only see-through Star Wars figure.

2. EMPEROR PALPATINE (STAR WARS: POTF)

So let's get this straight...ol' Emperor Palpatine here can shoot lightning from his fingertips powerful enough to flatten Luke Skywalker and kill Darth Vader, but his action-accessory is a wooden cane? What the hell? Where are the snap-on energy-bolts? Instead of something cool like that, he comes with...a stick. Hot damn, let's go clubbin' Jawas! And not that this has anything to do with anything, but what's the deal with the hats on them Imperial Dignitaries? They look like cross-dressing Cruella De Vils. Ah whatever. On to number three...

3. BIB FORTUNA (STAR WARS: POTF)

How miffed was this guy when Jabba dropped the only other semi-humanoid creature with tentacles growing outta her head into the Rancor pit? Man, after that it's either getting used to lonely nights in the bunk or slipping Salacious Crumb a mickey and playing "Foul the Muppet." Either way, it can't be fun. That and there's no way Jabba can reach the toilet under his own power...and you know it's Bib standing there with a hose and a squeegee after the Big "J" let's go of alla them li'l frog things he's snackin on. Ick.

number three

4. HAN SOLO IN ENDOR GEAR (STAR WARS POTF)

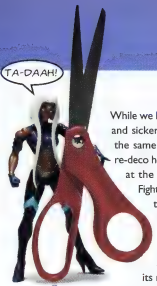
Yeah, it looks like we got some big payoff from Kenner with alla these Kenner-made Star Wars figures hoggin' the top-slots, but it's a fact: Star Wars figures are the hottest tickets around. As soon as a new assortment of figures is released, they get swallowed up by frothing collectors, making it weeks before the figures are available to sane collectors who don't wake up at 6:00 a.m. to stand in line at the local Toys R Us and buy everything in sight. Yeah, you guys may get Endor Han before us, but we sleep late on Saturdays. Nyah.

5. LANDO CALRISSIAN IN SKIFF GUARD DISGUISE

(STAR WARS: POTF)

Sheesh, did we catch some crap for making Lando/Colt .45 jokes in the first Toy-Fare special and in our parent 'zine Wizard. For those of you who are too young to remember or far too sensitive to function in reality, here's the deal: Billy Dee Williams (a.k.a. Lando Calrissian) used to be a Colt .45 (a brand of malt liquor) spokesman. That's why we do those jokes. Geez, if you can't laugh at that sort of thing, you gotta learn to lighten up.

number five



number six

6. STORM

(X-MEN: ROBOT FIGHTERS)

While we here at ToyFare are getting sicker and sicker of endless repaints/variants of the same figure, the short-haired Storm re-deco here kicks monster butt! Released at the tail-end of the X-Men: Robot Fighters line, short-doo' Storm stands tall as THE best Storm action figure ever made, though the Storm that's part of the X-Men: Water Wars (see page 16) is lookin' to give that title a run for its money.

7. LUKE SKYWALKER IN ENDOR GEAR (STAR WARS: POTF)

Praise Allah, a Star Wars figure with bendable knees! Yeah, the Swoop Trooper and the Biker Scout figures have that magical joint, but those two schleps look ridiculous when not sitting on their li'l scooters, which arrive with alla these figures. Hey Kenner, as cool as the Star Wars figures are, you guys would have gone down in history with the coolest toy line ever if you made the li'l Lucasfilm buggers with knee AND elbow joints.

number seven

8. CAPTAIN AMERICA

(SPIDER-MAN: ELECTRO SPARK)

While it took Toy Biz about five years to get around to making a new Cap after their crappy first-run version back in '90, the new Cap kicks butt! We'll even overlook his too-angry face, overly small stars, misplaced mask wings and God-awful shield because of one thing: the big "A" on his noggin instead of those inane Nazi Wings from "Heroes Reborn."

number eight

9. HARLEY QUINN

(THE ADVENTURES OF BATMAN & ROBIN)

Geez, it took long enough to get this figure made…but man, it was worth the wait! Just look at the sculpting on this babe! Hat's off to Kenner for not only a beautiful line in Batman: The Animated Series (or Batman & Robin…or D.U.O. Force…or whatever the hell they're calling it these days), but for finally giving the fans the figures we've been clamoring for all these years. Now get crackin' on a Batgirl in her classic costume.

number nine

10. ELECTRO

(SPIDER-MAN: ELECTRO SPARK)

To think they made a Shocker and a Morbius figure before our buddy Max Dillon here. Ah, we can't get too mad at them Toy Biz folks. Any company that gives you action figures of Swarm, Wendigo, Tarantula and Beta Ray Bill deserves some slack. But not too much. (Check out "ToyFare News" beginning on page 11 for a look at the bunch of 'em!) Okay Toy Biz, you gave us Electro. Now we want Sandman. (Man, are we annoying or what?)

number ten

Castaway FROM THE ISLAND OF MISFIT TOYS

R5-D4

HIS CRIME: Being slingshot fodder. "Attack R5-D4"? Unposeable vending-machine looking R5-D4 is more like it. He's awful! His legs are connected at the base with a plastic strip and his only articulation aside from splitting in half and shooting a missile (wha'…?) are his legs. Just give us an M-80 and a match and we'll redo his Jawa/malfunction scene in "Star Wars: The Special Edition" like you wouldn't believe. TF

Huh?!?

HOW TO USE THE TOYFARE PRICE GUIDE

First Off...

The following 30-odd pages feature the ToyFare Price Guide, the most accurate and up-to-date action figure price guide in the known universe. To insure that it's the most bestest price guide available, we stay in contact with hundreds of retailers throughout the country and regularly send scouts to comic/sci-fi/toy shows to see what the li'l buggers are selling for (and which ones are really selling).

But, even with working our fingers to the bone, do keep in mind that a price guide is just that, a GUIDE. Prices most definitely vary depending on local availability and popularity of a figure.

Finding Stuff...

It's easy, and best of all, you can learn at home. The price guide is arranged alphabetically by toy lines. Listings for figures related to movie series (i.e. "The Empire Strikes Back"), are posted chronologically under the original movie title ("Star Wars"). When a title has been used several times for different line, like Star Wars: Power of the Force, we also list all lines chronologically.

Skipping articles "A," "An," and "The" at the beginning of a title, alphabetization is word by word, not letter by letter. So, "The Mask" is listed under "Mask," and "The Tick" is listed under "Tick." "Star Trek: Starfleet Academy" comes before "Star Trek: The Next Generation" because we include the article "The" in alphabetizing when it appears as an interior word in the title. Using the one-word-at-a-time approach, all titles starting with the word "Star," including "Star Wars," are used up before we go on to titles such as "Starting Lineup." Abbreviations such as "Dr." will be found before titles starting with "Dragon" but after titles starting with "Doctor." Figures with names beginning with numerals—such as "2-1B"—will be appear at the top of each listing.

Why Two Prices?

All first-column prices are values for mint figures in mint boxes (MIB). Second-column prices are for loose mint figures (LM).

Of course, there are all sorts of grades in between, and if you're the anal type, we've diagrammed a few of them to help make things a little easier. Keep in mind this is only a guide, and percentages can vary depending on several factors, including age, supply and demand for the various grades, retailer location, local availability of a figure and its current popularity.

Any new figure that has just been released but hasn't been widely traded yet is marked with **••.

What's What...

An annoyingly in-depth look at grading action figures:

MINT (MIB) PACKAGING: Absolutely perfect. No price tag, no bent corner, no minor crease, no nuthin'. Can fetch up to 125%-%150 of MIB value. FIGURE: A perfect figure with no sign of usage. Must include every packaged accessory, all in perfect condition and working order. Can fetch up to 125%-%150 of LM value.

NEAR MINT (NM) PACKAGING: Just a notch or two below perfect. Tiny flaws may include a small tear or crease. Normally fetches 100% of the MIB value. FIGURE: Just about perfect. Minor smudge/color-flaking. All packaged accessories are present (minor smudge/color flaking acceptable) and in working order.

VERY FINE (VF) PACKAGING: Several minor tears/creases. Usually 75%-80% of MIB value. FIGURE: More pronounced smudge/color-flaking. All accessories are present with (possible) more pronounced smudges/flaking.

FINE (FN) PACKAGING: Multiple tears/creases of a more profound nature, possible corners missing/minor writing. Around 40%-50% of MIB value. Figure: Loose joints, heavy smudge/color flaking, may not contain any accessories.

VERY GOOD (VG) PACKAGING: Major crease/tears, large portions of packaging missing, significant writing/stains. You're looking at 15%-25% of MIB value. FIGURE: Major discolored areas, "wobbly" body parts, may not contain any accessories.

GOOD (G), FAIR (FR) and POOR (P) PACKAGING: Heavily torn/creased/written on to the point of obscurity. Sells for about 5%-10% of the MIB value. FIGURE: Major discolored areas, excessively loose body parts, portions of figure may be missing (ponytail, capes, etc.), may not contain any accessories. TF

Mint in box? That's him on the left. Mint out of box? That's the monkey on the right

Toy Fare PRICE GUIDE

The toys in this guide are priced as follow: Prices listed on the left are for mint in package (MIP), meaning that the toys have never been removed from their original packaging; items not in any packaging (loose) or missing any of their original accessories vary significantly and are generally worth the prices listed on the right. A listing marked with a  means that particular figure has not been released yet from the manufacturer. In some cases, these figures are canceled, and thus, never released.

Remember, this is only a guide, and prices can vary for a variety of reasons, including local scarcity.

WOLVERINE VS. STRETCH ARMSTRONG
X-Men: Robot Fighters (Toy Biz)

Hey, kids! Wanna know the secret recipe for making your own Stretch Armstrong stretchy filling? Corn syrup. That's all. According to Susan Szmik, assistant director of marketing at CapToys, the filling is used because it's edible and non-toxic. "The solution is made of latex. The inside will just harden up when it's exposed to air," says Szmik. There's no danger of Stretch's guts spilling out all over the place, and you won't get sick if you happen to...well...eat him. EWWWW! And in the rare event your Stretch Armstrong figure ever gets stabbed with a knitting needle, you can just patch him up with an ordinary Band-Aid (just make sure it's the ouchless kind).

JURASSIC JAWAS

Star Wars: Power of the Force 97/Jurassic Park (Kenner)

1997 looks to be a verrrry good year for the Cincinnati-based Kenner company. A long time ago and not so far away, the then-fledgling toy company found the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow by snatching up the master toy license for "Star Wars." Twenty years later, Kenner is enjoying even greater success with its brand-new Star Wars toys, buoyed by the recent Special Edition re-releases of George Lucas's trilogy. Add to that Kenner's lines based on the "Jurassic Park" sequel "The Lost World" and "Batman & Robin," and you'll see that Kenner's got probably the three biggest licenses of the summer movie box office. And when it comes to associated toy sales, that's a no-brainer.

THE FLASH & QUICKSILVER MEET NELSON

Batman: Total Justice (Kenner)/X-Men Mutant Armor (Toy Biz)

The year is 1998. You can't swing a dead cat without hitting someone wearing a Simpsons T-shirt, and Mattel is there. The company's Simpsons toy line lasted only a year and enjoyed moderate success, according to Mattel Product Manager Geoffrey Walker. But unlike most action figures, the majority of the buyers were collectors, not kids. Mattel blames this on a lack of conflict/play value, or in other words, the characters weren't designed to beat each other up. (Except for Nelson, of course.) And despite "The Simpsons" continued popularity on TV, Fox Licensing refuses to speculate on the future of the line...so there won't be much joy in Springfield for Simpsons' toy fans anytime soon.

DARTH VADER

Star Wars: Power of the Force (12-Inch) (Hasbro)

Hasbro New Ventures' new 12-inch Star Wars Collector's Edition would be the best place for a first-ever Darth Vader action figure with removable helmet, right? Don't hold your breath. While Hasbro New Ventures' Senior Marketing Director Vinnie D'Alleva doesn't exactly rule out the prospect of seeing Anakin Skywalker's charred noggin, it probably won't be any time soon. "We're planning on doing some other things with Darth Vader in '97, but they're all versions from the first film [Vader had different costumes for the 2nd and 3rd flicks], so they still won't have the removable helmet," he says. How the removable costume is an entirely different story...

Marvel Super Heroes/Spider-Man: Electro Spark (Toy Biz)

Year after year, Toy Biz keeps outdoing itself with better-looking figures and more obscure characters mixed into its popular assortments. "We've definitely evolved," says Toy Biz Product Manager Jesse Falcon. "That's the one thing we've tried to do. It's a real goal for us to surprise what we've done in the past with our sense of design, articulation and sculpture. When you look at some of the first Marvel stuff that came out, there's a serious difference just from year one to year two. We keep trying to improve every year to get closer to what we see in the comic books." And judging from Cap's evolution from skinny spud to macho stud, the 'Biz is doing just that.

MODOK & SUGAR MAN

Iron Man/X-Men: Mutant Monsters (Toy Biz)

One of the secrets behind Toy Biz's great success with Marvel Comics-based action figures is that the 'Biz can get big-name comic book artists like Joe Madureira (designer of wacky II'l Sugar Man here), Dave Johnson (X-Men: Star Riders) and Steve Skroce (Spider-Man: Web Splashers) to design their figures. "It helps us to add an air of legitimacy when we do different versions of Spider-Man and Wolverine," explains our man at Toy Biz, Jesse Falcon. "If we can get the guys who are really behind creating the characters and bringing them to life, then it seems right for the character, even if he never wears a certain costume in the comic books. There's some air of authenticity to it."

JONNY QUEST & CO.
Jonny Quest (Galoob)

When seeking a new animated series to air on Ted Turner's Cartoon Network, Hanna-Barbera (now owned by TNT) didn't have to look farther than its own vaults to rediscover "Jonny Quest," starring the classic teenage sci-fi adventurer of the 1960s. But in this age of cyberspace, the once-cutting-edge Jonny had to be updated to appeal to today's audiences. Thus, Questworld, a virtual reality program, was introduced to new Quest fans, allowing Galoob Toys to create two separate toy lines: a set of 3 3/4-inch action figures and vehicles based on traditional cel animation, and a group of figures made from translucent plastic to recreate the CGI graphics of Questworld.

IRON MEN

Marvel Super Heroes/Iron Man (Toy Biz)

But of all the revamped Marvel characters from Marvel Comics' "Heroes Reborn" storyline, Jim Lee's version of Iron Man is the only one to be used in Toy Biz' new Avengers: Legends of Power line. (Check out ToyFare News for a pic!) With last year's Iron Man line in the dumps following the cancellation of the animated "Iron Man," this looks like the only place to find ol' Shell-Head. Unless an Iron Man feature film is made, that is. According to Toy Biz Product Manager Jesse Falcon, Iron Man's future looks bright. "We'll definitely make more toys if we have a movie to go along. And if this Avengers line does well, there's also a possibility we'll do different versions of him."

THE RED 1SZ

The Maxx (McFarlane Toys)

Why did McFarlane Toys choose to make a red 1sz as part of its McFarlane Toys Collector's Club exclusives? "Why not?" responds Club Director Chet Jacques. "We ran a contest on the Internet to pick a new color and had suggestions like purple, gold and a combination black/white, but we decided to go with red." Red had the added advantage of complementing other McFarlane Toys Collector's Club exclusives like Red Angela and Red Spawn. (Notice a theme here?) And no, the red 1sz never appeared in Sam Kieth's The Maxx, which is probably just as well, all things considered. Just imagine shopping for the Rainbow 1sz collection...

CY-GOR
Spawn Series 4 (McFarlane Toys)

Which came first: Cy-Gor the action figure or Cy-Gor the Spawn comic book character? Actually, they were simultaneous," explains McFarlane Toys Collector's Club Director Chet Jacques. "One day, Todd [McFarlane] was showing the sculptors some new character designs for Spawn [including Cy-Gor]. Those sculptors went on to design the figure while McFarlane developed the character. Cy-Gor's name was originally going to be Go-Rilla, but nobody liked it except Todd," confides Jacques. Other potential names were selected, then discarded, such as Prime-9 (which is why there is a number 9 on the figure's shoulder...duh). But c'mon...what's the real reason for Cy-Gor's existence? "Todd likes to draw big monkeys," reveals Jacques. Boo-kay...

CENTAUR VS. SCOTTY

Hercules: The Legendary Journeys (Toy Biz)/ Classic Star Trek (Playmates)

Having a successful TV series doesn't always make for an action figure success story. Take "Hercules: The Legendary Journeys," for example. Despite being based on the hot syndicated show starring Kevin Sorbo, Toy Biz's toy line isn't quite as successful just yet. Toy Biz Product Manager Jesse Falcon explains that it might have something to do with the show's scheduling. "We knew the toys would be spotty because the show has different air times. In Chicago, it'll be on in the afternoon—which is great—but in other areas, it's on later at night, so a lot of kids won't see it." Fans of the nifty Xena: Toys needn't worry about the line's cancellation, though. Next up is a Xena Mt. Olympus assortment!

DAGGIT & CYLON

Battlestar Galactica (Mattel)

The first Battlestar Galactica toys (a couple of the 10 figures in the set are shown above) were released in 1978 and 1979 by the Mattel toy company. The TF show still maintains a cult following—popular enough that Rob Liefeld's Maximum Press recently started a Battlestar Galactica comic, while Trendmasters has begun a new toy line based on the short-lived sci-fi fave. Curiously, Trendmasters' VP of Marketing Bewayne Booker indicates its toys are not intended to tie into the comic. "We felt that a niche existed among both old and new fans of the show," says Booker, who notes Trendmasters plans to continue bringing out new Galactica toys, even though the company is not aware of any plans for a new movie or TV show.

Mars Attacks (Classic/Movie Trendmasters/) Super Powers Collection (Kenner)

For the toys based on the recent "Mars Attacks!" motion picture, Trendmasters wanted to reach both the mainstream and niche markets, according to Trendmasters' Product VP of Marketing Dewayne Booker. To this end, Trendmasters decided to release two separate-but-similar toy lines: one based on the movie, and one adapted from the classic Mars Attacks! trading cards (which, coincidentally, came first). While both lines have been successful, Booker says the movie line, which has a more animated look, has been more strongly received. "While the movie didn't do great, it did draw attention to the characters," he explains. Booker also promises that Trendmasters will continue to expand both lines, with a special focus on the trading card figures.

THOR & BATMAN (W/REMOVABLE COWL)
World's Greatest Super-Heroes! (Mego)

Even though the late, lamented Mego Corp. produced "secret identity"-ready versions of both Batman (pictured) and Robin, with removable cowl and mask, in the early '70s, the company also produced true "Alter Egos" through Montgomery Ward in 1974. These versions of Batman, Robin, Spider-Man and Superman weren't true action figures—instead, Mego issued replacement heads and civilian clothing only. Both Bruce Wayne and Dick Grayson's replacement heads were from the "removable" mask issues of Batman and Robin. Clark Kent was merely Mego's Superman head with separate glasses and hat accessories. And Spidey? Mego just took the Shazam! head, gave it blue eyes and said HELLO to Peter Parker! That here didn't get squat.

Masters of the Universe (Mattel)

Between 1982 and 1986, Mattel Toys released six series of action figures based on the popular animated series "Masters of the Universe." Hoping to duplicate its tremendous success, Mattel brought out a second line of He-Man figures in 1989 to tie into the newly redesigned "He-Man: The Animated Series." While the new show was popular, He-Man just wasn't as hot the second time around. "The essence of the brand was lost. It just wasn't heroic enough," recalls Mattel Product Manager Doug Wadleigh. Whaddaya mean, "Not heroic enough?" He-Man rode around on a big green tiger, for crying out loud! Although Mattel has no plans to reissue He-Man at present, fans are circulating petitions on the Internet to bring the toy line back.

DARKSEID

Batman: Total Justice (Kenner)

Created in the '70s by comics legend Jack "King" Kirby as the antagonist for his "Fourth World" comics at DC (Forever People, New Gods and Mister Miracle), the villainous Darkseid can give just about any hero a run for his money. When Kirby returned to DC in the mid-'80s to launch the comic mini-series Super Powers, which tied into Kenner's toy line and later animated series, Kirby even got a share of the profit for the characters he created as a nice gratuity for his lifetime in comics. Now, over a decade later, Kirby has sadly passed away...but Darkseid has returned as a major villain in Kenner's new Total Justice line. Plus, he'll be added to the company's nifty Superman line later this year!

Unstandard Fair

The 'ToyFare' crew spends two chaotic days at the 1997 International Toy Fair

By Pat McCallum

We were trapped in a "Seinfeld" episode.

If it could break, we broke it. If you could do the wrong thing, we did it. If something could possibly go wrong, it did. The place: The 1997 International Toy Fair, the toy event of the year. The participants: Toy Biz, Kenner, Playmates and all the big guns of the toy industry gathered in New York City to showcase their new product releases to buyers from all over the world.

We go in, we see the toys and we get out. At least that was the plan…

Day One

9:15 A.M.

Two seven-foot Bananas in Pajamas burst into the press room, interrupting a keynote speech on the state of the toy industry. As the room goes deathly quiet, the two ill-fated Bananas are forcibly removed. This is a bad omen.

Photos: Paul Schiraldi

Bananas. Pajamas. New York City. Something had to give...

10:00 A.M.

Go, go, Power Rangers!!! Three Power Rangers in unforgivingly tight outfits give us the lowdown on all the new Bandai toys. Our question of "Which one of you is Donatello?" doesn't go over well and we split.

11:00 A.M.

We pile into an already overcrowded elevator, descend three inches and, with a "clunk," the doors pop open. After about a minute, we take the hint and catch a second elevator.

11:05 A.M.

We crowd into a second elevator, followed by a behemoth of a man clocking in close to that 300-pound mark. The doors close and, as before, a loud "clunk" is heard.

This time, the doors don't open.

11:06 A.M.

The doors still aren't opening.

11:15 A.M.

The elevator's getting really hot, behemoth-boy is cracking painfully unfunny jokes and there's a little weaselly guy shifting his weight from foot to foot, shooting furtive glances at the ceiling and muttering, "They're takin' us through the roof. We're goin' through the roof." Even if the Power Rangers would want to save us, it's becoming apparent that nobody knows we're even trapped in here.

11:20 A.M.

A-ha! The walkie-talkies!!! ToyFare Editor Scott Beatty remembers he's got a walkie-talkie to stay in touch with our roving photographer Paul Schiraldi and, in Luke Skywalker/trash compactor fashion, we radio out and help is on the way!

11:25 A.M.

Fresh air.

11:30 A.M.

McFarlane Toys! We pass owner and comic book mogul Todd McFarlane as he's being interviewed by the Fox network, maneuver around the props from the upcoming "Spawn" movie and jump into seats in a mini-theater to catch a sneak peek at the "Spawn" movie trailer.

3:50 P.M.

Sidestepping the ambiguously sexed professional wrestler Goldust, we enter Playmates, each receiving a free…shot glass? (When you think booze, think Playmates!)

4:30 P.M.

We split Toy Fair for the day and Matt Senreich catches a car antenna in the face at the parking garage. 'Tis only a flesh wound!

Day Two

10:15 A.M.

With a Death Star Commander as our guide, we tour Kenner's Star Wars display and learn that dark forces are indeed at work! Not only was an original Lando Calrissian figure from 1980 swiped earlier in the day, but the new Lay's Potato Chips exclusive "Spirit of Ben Kenobi" figure was stolen the day before—not just one, but three of 'em! Toy Fair…you'll never find a more wretched hive of scum and villainy.

10:45 A.M.

Poison Ivy, unaware of our special clearance, almost knocks our photographer flat as he snaps a photo of the new Batman & Robin toys in Kenner's "No Photographs" room.

2:30 P.M.

We defy the gods and get in an elevator for the 10-flight ride down the International Toy Center building. A mild buzzing in the background, we wait for the elevator to move.

2:31 P.M.

Still waiting.

2:32 P.M.

Wizard Press Online Editor Buddy Scalera realizes his ass is pressed against the alarm button. Amid the curses of disgruntled elevator passengers, we hightail it outta there to avoid whoever answers elevator alarm buttons and take the stairs—all 10 flights of 'em.

2:45 P.M.

The heating at Trendmasters is on the fritz and the Japanese spokesman for Godzilla: Doom Island is putting on an uncomfortably, over-the-top, stereotypical accent and closes his sales pitch with, "Oh no, here come Godzirra! Rook out!...Now get out. It's too hot in here." We're outta there before he can finish his sentence.

3:30 P.M.

After two days of bad food, broken elevators and sweaty spokesmodels, we escape Toy Fair.

It's time to put those Playmates shot glasses to the test. TF

ToyFare Editor-in-Chief Pat McCallum could have made that 20-minute stalled elevator experience a lot more unpleasant, but he held it in.
